1 Pursuant to the Court's December 2, 2019 Order for Briefing (D.I. 40),
2 Defendants Infor, Inc. ("Infor") and NetSuite Inc. ("NetSuite") file this Supplemental 3 Brief Pursuant to the Court's Order for Briefing (D.I. 40).

4 A. What is the current status of the Square Enix case pending in Texas,
5 and how would it affect any of the four related cases before this 6 Court?

7 The Square Enix case in the Eastern District of Texas is still in its early stages.
8 Square Enix has not yet filed a responsive pleading, and the most recent docket entry
9 reflects an Order granting Uniloc 2017 LLC's ("Uniloc") motion for the appointment
10 of an international process server. See Uniloc 2017 LLC v. Square Enix Holdings
11 Co., Ltd. et al., No. 2:19-cv-00221, D.I. 7 (E.D. Tex., Oct. 9, 2019). To the extent the 12 Eastern District of Texas court decides issues against Uniloc in that case, or Uniloc 13 takes certain positions before that court, Uniloc could be bound by those rulings or 14 positions consistent with applicable law, including principles of equitable estoppel 15 and res judicata. Infor and NetSuite are unaware of other specific reasons why the 16 Square Enix case would affect the related cases before this Court.

17 B. NetSuite, in its papers, contends that adopting Judge Schroeder's 18 claim construction would be dispositive of the case against it. Is this 19 also true of the infringement claims in the other cases (viz., the 20 claims in Infor and the counterclaims in Square Enix and Ubisoft)?

21 Infor believes that if Judge Schroeder's claim construction were adopted, it
22 would likely preclude any infringement allegation against Infor, and would at a 23 minimum would narrow the case. Infor's pending motion to dismiss (Case No 8:19-24 cv-1150, D.I. 35) is not based on this construction, however, but rather on Uniloc's
25 inability to plead compliance with 35 U.S.C. § 287(a) and failure to plead 26 infringement consistent with the Federal Circuit's eligibility decision in the Uniloc v.
27 ADP case.

28 Infor and NetSuite lack specific knowledge as to whether and to what extent

1 Judge Schroeder's prior Markman order affects or is relevant to the infringement
2 issues in the Ubisoft, and Square Enix cases.

3 Importantly, neither Infor nor NetSuite were parties to the cases in the Eastern 4 District of Texas that resulted in Judge Schroeder's Markman Order.<sup>1</sup>

5 On the other hand, Square Enix was a party to the prior Texas litigation that 6 resulted in Judge Schroeder's Markman ruling on the '578 and '293 patents, and 7 Ubisoft was involved in that Markman as it concerns the related '466 and '766
8 patents. See Uniloc USA, Inc. et al v. AVG Techs. USA, Inc., No. 2:16-cv-00393, D.I.
9 210 (E.D. Tex. Aug. 16, 2017). Therefore, NetSuite and Infor are differently-situated 10 than Ubisoft, Square Enix, and Uniloc as it concerns Markman issues.

11 C. In its Supplemental Rule 26(f) Report, Uniloc refers to “an 12 interlocutory claim construction order” that is currently the subject
13 of a motion to reconsider. Is this claim construction the same one 14 that NetSuite contends would be dispositive of its case?

15 Yes, but Judge Schroeder never labeled that ruling as “interlocutory” or ever 16 suggested that it was preliminary. Rather, Judge Schroeder issued a claim 17 construction order in the ADP cases after multiple rounds of briefing, and a full 18 Markman hearing. See Uniloc USA, Inc. et al. v. ADP, LLC, No. 2:16-cv-00741, D.I.
19 225 (E.D. Tex. Aug. 11, 2017). Uniloc recently moved for partial reconsideration of 20 Judge Schroeder's Markman order, but notably never asked Judge Schroeder to 21 modify his construction of “application program(s)” as to the '293 patent. See Uniloc
22 USA, Inc. et al. v. ADP, LLC, No. 2:16-cv-00741, D.I. 344 (E.D. Tex. Nov. 5, 2019).
23 Uniloc apparently concedes that the limiting arguments made during prosecution of 24 U.S. Patent No. 6,510,466 (“the '466 patent”) apply with equal force to limit

25 <sup>1</sup> NetSuite's Motion to Dismiss (Case No. 8:19-cv-01151, D.I. 27) is based on the 26 proposition that Uniloc had an opportunity to argue the construction of the term
27 “application program(s)” before Judge Schroeder, and should not get a complete re-28 do as to NetSuite when it has not alleged, and appears unable to allege under Rule 11, infringement against NetSuite under Judge Schroeder's construction of “application program(s).”

1 construction of the term “application program(s)” in the ’293 patent—which is a 2 continuation of the ’466 patent. Id. at 3-13. Uniloc simply disputes that the 3 prosecution history of the ’466 patent is relevant to construction of the term
4 “application program(s)” in the ’578 patent, id., despite Judge Schroder’s
5 (unchallenged) findings in his Markman order that the ’578 patent incorporates by 6 reference the ’466 patent and “explicitly states” that it is “related” to the ’578 patent.
7 See Uniloc USA, Inc. et al. v. ADP, LLC, No. 2:16-cv-00741, D.I. 233 at 11-14 (E.D.
8 Tex. Aug. 16, 2017).

9 D. The Court is presently considering three options for consolidating
10 these cases:

- 11 (i) Consolidating all four cases together;
12 (ii) Consolidating Square Enix with Ubisoft (the declaratory 13 judgment cases), and Infor with NetSuite; and 14 (iii) Consolidating Ubisoft, Infor, and NetSuite, but leaving *Square
15 Enix* separate.

16 Which of these options – in light of the pending Square Enix action
17 in Texas and this Court’s interest in efficient case management – 18 would provide for the most equitable and efficient resolution of 19 these cases?

20 NetSuite and Infor believe that Option (ii) would be most equitable and 21 efficient.<sup>2</sup> Each of NetSuite and Infor have outstanding motions to dismiss and to 22 stay discovery pending resolution of those motions. Both motions to dismiss are tied, 23 at least in part, to Uniloc’s failure to plead a plausible case of infringement consistent
24 with prior rulings from Judge Schroeder and the Federal Circuit regarding the ’578
25 and ’293 patents. Before the Court’s transfer order, NetSuite and Infor were in a 26 similar procedural posture, with case management conferences set to proceed before 27 Judge Staton a week apart, and hearing dates on their respective motions set relatively 28 close in time.
