1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Plaintiff Uniloc 2017 LLC (“Uniloc”) fails to allege infringement under a 3 claim construction ruling that was already issued on these same two asserted patents
4 by Judge Schroeder in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of 5 Texas, after more than a year of contentious litigation. Accordingly, Uniloc’s 6 Complaint should be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim.

7 Uniloc’s predecessors-in-interest—Uniloc USA, Inc. and Uniloc Luxembourg,
8 S.A.—first asserted the two patents in this case, U.S. Patent No. 6,324,578 (“the ’578
9 patent”) and U.S. Patent No. 7,069,293 (“the ’293 patent”), against defendant
10 NetSuite, Inc. (“NetSuite”) in August 2016 in the Eastern District of Texas, and over 11 the years, Uniloc and its predecessors have asserted them against different companies 12 in approximately 50 separate cases. On August 16, 2017, more than a year and 100-
13 plus docket entries into Uniloc’s suit against NetSuite, Judge Schroeder issued a 68-14 page claim construction order in a related case on many key terms from the ’293 and 15 ’578 patents that all but ended Uniloc’s chances of proving infringement against 16 NetSuite. A month later, Uniloc voluntarily dismissed its case against NetSuite under 17 Fed. R. Civ. P. 41(a)(1)(A)(i). The dismissal was without prejudice because NetSuite 18 had a motion to dismiss outstanding at the time, and had not yet answered.

19 Now, nearly two years later, Uniloc is back. It re-filed effectively the same 20 Complaint against NetSuite, without any attempt to address infringement under Judge 21 Schroeder’s claim construction order, which continues to govern in those ongoing 22 related cases.

23 While full-blown claim construction proceedings may be inappropriate at the 24 pleading stage, courts often decide straightforward, case-dispositive claim 25 construction questions that turn on the intrinsic record. This is exactly that situation:
26 another federal judge has already construed certain claim terms of the ’293 and ’578
27 patents, and this Court need only adopt a single construction, for “application 28 program(s),” which turns entirely on an issue of law—whether an admitted disclaimer
