 D. “re-centering command”9

III. The challenged claims are obvious over the TSE combinations.....10

 A. TSE is a prior art printed publication.10

 1. Unrebutted evidence establishes that TSE was actually disseminated to the interested public in August 1998.10

 2. TSE was otherwise publicly available based on its wide, unrestricted distribution to the interested public.12

 B. The challenged claims are obvious.14

 1. Claims 1 and 26 are obvious over the TSE-Belden-Togher combination.....14

 combination.....15

3.	Claim 11 is obvious over the TSE-Belden-Togher combination.....	15
4.	The Petition establishes prima facie obviousness of claims 9, 10, 22, and 23.....	16
IV.	TT’s alleged secondary considerations fail to show that the challenged claims are nonobvious.	17
A.	The Petition presents a strong prima facie obviousness showing, which TT’s evidence cannot overcome.....	17
B.	TT fails to establish the requisite nexus, which is a fatal flaw.	18
1.	TT’s POR doesn’t establish a nexus.	19
2.	TT isn’t entitled to a presumption of nexus.....	20
3.	TT fails to establish a nexus because the alleged secondary considerations result from unclaimed/known features.	21
4.	TT reuses evidence offered in supported of different inventions without making any attempt to tie any of this evidence specifically to the claims at issue here.	22
C.	TT’s evidence doesn’t support the alleged secondary considerations.....	23
1.	TT’s global revenue and units sold fails to establish that MD Trader was commercially successful.	23
2.	TT’s licenses resulted from litigation.	25
3.	TT conflates copying with competing products that allegedly fall within the claims.....	27

4.	TT’s proffered praise for MD Trader isn’t from a competitor and is directed to unclaimed features.....	28
5.	TT admits that there was no long-felt need.	29
6.	TT presents no evidence that others tried and failed to make the claimed invention.	29
7.	TT’s other alleged secondary considerations are either unsupported or simply not relevant.	30
