A company's margin policy: Initial Margin Requirement (IMR) or simply 'margin' for accounts of $1,000 to $20,000 starts with $500 per minimum trade size (unit) or around 1/2% both for 'day' and 'over-night' trading. You require a minimum of $500 to maintain each unit.

MGFG's Margin Policy is as such:

- $500 for accounts under $20,000
- $1000 for accounts between $20,000 and $50,000
- $2000 for accounts between $50,000 and $100,000
- $3000 for accounts between $100,000 and $200,000
- $4000 for accounts over $200,000
- $5000 margin available on request, which entitles the account holder to earn interest on overnight positions.

When one's account balance is no longer able to cover one's minimum margin requirement one's positions are closed automatically. Due to the fact that margin requirements are so low the Trader will not receive a margin call warning, but will instead be closed out automatically.

Examples:

I. You have $1,000 on your account. You did one trade of one unit. The minimum margin requirement is $500. At the time when you are losing $400 you decide to close your position. Your new balance is $600. You still can trade. But if your losses amount to $101 your position will be closed automatically and your account will be left with a balance of $499, not enough to open a new position.

II. You have $2000 on your account. You do one trade consisting of two units. The minimum margin requirement is now $1000 and not $500 due to the fact that you now have 2 units open. If you lose more than $1000 both your positions will be closed and you will have $1000 left in your acct.

We do not close positions selectively: in a margin call all open

Account Status feature tracks your margin requirements on a per tick basis so that one is never unaware as to where they stand in regards to margin.
