consider whether or not the products at issue here embody the claims?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection to form.

A. Well, I -- I guess I would answer that a couple of ways. One is that I'm responding to what Mr. Green -- in the analysis he set forth. And I also understand from Mr. Green's analysis that he is relying on what Mr. Brookstein has done from a technical perspective. And I also understand that Mr. Brookstein has only analyzed four pairs of pants. And I understand there's more than SKUs that are at issue and included in the sales information that Mr. Green has analyzed. So in that regard I think that, certainly, was something I took into consideration in responding to what Mr. Green has set forth.

I think also I was asked, and I think, understand to be appropriate, is to assess the features associated with the dependent claims and whether those have an impact on the sales or success of any of -- of the products that are at issue. And that, certainly, would be something that I would take a look at as well.

Q. Have -- have you dealt with analyzing the non-obviousness of or obviousness of dependent

- Q. Okay. Prior to this case, did you have an understanding of that analysis?
 - A. Understanding of what analysis?
 - Q. Of how to look at a dependent claim?
- A. Well, I -- I guess I -- I had an -- I have an understanding that, typically, in performing economic analysis, you're looking at features of a claims in any other cases you worked on?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection to form.

- A. I -- I'd have to go back and -- and take a look. That perhaps could be the case. I've worked on a number of cases. So, therefore, that may well be the case.
- Q. Right. Well, earlier we talked about the only case where you gave a deposition at least regarding commercial success. It was this case where I get the company name wrong, VIIV?
 - A. Uh-huh.
- Q. In that case were you dealing with the dependent claims or independent claims?

A. I'd have to go back -- I'm not sure.

product and which features are covered by certain claims of a patent. That's an analysis that I performed in the past, and that's how I understand such analysis is to be performed. The legal ramifications is not something that I -- I would get involved with. I'm not a legal expert. I'm not an attorney. So...

Q. Okay. You used the term "features" several times. In -- in patent law we often use the word "elements."

Are you familiar with the word elements in patent law?

- A. Just -- just generally. Again, I'm not an attorney. So...
- Q. What's your general understanding of elements?
 - A. Certain aspects, I guess.
- Q. Okay. Is -- when you are using the word "features," is that the same thing as elements?
- A. I don't -- again, I'm not an attorney. I'm not giving legal opinions. So, I don't know that it would necessarily be the same.
- Q. Okay. What -- what do you mean by a feature of a claim?
 - A. Well, I -- I guess, to be clear, I'm --

I'm looking at -- for a particular product. You know, there are features to a product. In many cases you're assessing the impact of those features to the success or sales or the economic benefits of the product, whether that's in assessing the commercial success, assessing the reasonable royalty, or things of that nature. And so, that's what, as an economic expert, you typically do, or what I've typically done.

2.4

Q. By the way, would you agree with me that the Secret Fit Belly product is a commercial success?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

A. Well, I -- I don't know that. I haven't arrived at that opinion, and I am not sure that you can ultimately conclude from Mr. Green's analysis that it is, in fact, commercial success.

Q. Well, let me ask you this. You're not giving an opinion that's not -- I know -- I am asking too many dangerous...

Q. Have you applied those benchmarks to this case?

A. Well, what I can say is that Mr. Green has failed to apply, I think, those benchmarks. And so, in that regard I've concluded that he doesn't have the reasonable basis upon which to conclude that it's a commercial success. That's what I was asked to do, and that would be my opinion in this particular matter.

Q. Am I correct in that your opinion in this case is simply that Mr. Green hasn't met his burden of proof in your view of commercial success?

A. Well, I guess, you're -- you're giving -- you're asking a very general question. I think that certainly I don't believe Mr. Green has done the appropriate analysis in support of his opinions. I also believe that, in addition to that, there's evidence that would support findings contrary to Mr. Green's opinions.

Q. What evidence -- what evidence shows that Secret Fit Belly is not a commercial success?

A. Well, I --

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection to form.

A. -- I think that in response to what Mr. Green has set forth, and I think that I've

Q. Well, how do you -- how do you determine if a product is a commercial success in patent law?

A. Well, you could -- I mean, it depends on the facts and circumstances. I guess, there are certain ways that you can address the success. Again, it would depend on the situation.

Q. Well, hasn't the Federal Circuit said that it determined whether a product is a commercial success based on its market share and sales revenue?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

A. Again, I don't -- I haven't memorized the case law. I just want to be clear I'm not giving legal opinions. There may be cases out there that discuss those issues, and those may be benchmarks that could apply to a particular case.

identified in my report he's looked at -- as far as I can tell what he's looked at is that there were roughly in sales and -- and profits on those -- gross profits on those sales. And that there was a price differential and others have -- he claims that others have used the patent and technology. And that leads him to conclude that the Secret Fit Belly pants are commercial success.

And he's also compared those sales in relation to non-Secret Fit Belly pants. I think that that analysis is deficient in being able to arrive to the conclusions that he has arrived at.

Q. I think that in your statement you may have confused two different issues in the case. I want to make sure we're on the same page. There are two issues, I think, that are involved in your report and Mr. Green's report. One is whether the products are commercial success, and the other is whether there is a nexus between that commercial success and the claims.

Is that -- is that fair?

A. Well, I think that's -- those are the two opinions that Mr. Green has arrived at. And I believe I responded to those opinions.

Q. Okay. Am I correct that the price premium and -- well, let's start with the price premium. The price premium -- that actually connect -- that's actually associated with this issue about whether there's a nexus, correct?

A. I -- I'd have to go back and look at Mr. Green's report. He may be attempting to use

- A. I -- I'd have to go back and look at Mr. Green's report. He may be attempting to use that as a reason to suggest that there's -- somehow there's a nexus.
- Q. Well, what did you think he was doing when you responded to him?
- A. Well, I -- I would say that, in certain respects of his report, it was unclear as to what he was doing, and he was deficient in describing what he was doing on many fronts. So, but in in terms of what he did set forth, I -- I certainly concluded that it was not sufficient to support his findings or his opinions in this case.
- Q. Well, let me -- let me ask you this. In the economic analysis of commercial success, is it the -- the case that price premium is used to show that there's a nexus between the invention and the claims?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

A. Are you talking about Mr. Green's analysis?

-- not in obviousness analysis that you've done in the past?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- A. I -- I don't recall if that's something we did. I'd have to go back and look. That may have been, that may not have been.
- Q. Well, what -- what things have -- have you looked at in the past to show that there was a nexus between the claimed invention and the product in any analyses you did of non-obviousness or obviousness in the past?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- A. Well, understanding the differences between the products and what -- in those differences what -- what is -- what those differences are, and whether those are covered by the patents or claims that are at issue. That would be part of the analysis.
- Q. You said "understanding the differences." What -- what differences are you referring to?
- A. Meaning you could look at a -- one product as a comparison to another product and see if the -- the differences between those products would be what's covered by the patent or would

- Q. No, in general.
- A. Again, it depends on whether -- that -- that depends on the facts and circumstances whether that's appropriate or it isn't, whether you look at a difference in price. And that somehow relates to the nexus of the -- the patents at issue in that case.
 - Q. Well, what's your understanding?
- A. That's -- my understanding is that that could be something you take a look at. But whether that's relevant or not depends on the facts and circumstances of the case.
- Q. Well, what -- why do you look at the price premium in your economic analysis of commercial success?
- A. Again, it would depend on the situation, the facts and circumstances as to whether that would be something that would be relevant to assess in support of -- or in assessing whether there is a nexus or connection between the patents and the success of a product. It may or may not be the case. It depends on the situation.
- Q. Have you looked at a price premium in the past to examine whether there was a nexus between the claims and the products at issue in any include things other than what's covered by the patent.

- Q. And what would that tell you?
- A. Well, I would -- it would give you an indication as to whether making any other comparisons of those products would be relevant to the issue at hand. Or could be relevant.
- Q. You're aware that Mr. -- Mr. Brookstein did an analysis -- a comparison of Secret Fit Belly products to all the claims in this case. You're aware of that, correct?
- A. Well, I -- again I -- I'm not a technical expert. So, what all the details and things that he went through, I don't know that I could recite that verbatim. I understand that he has arrived at opinions that the four pants, pairs of pants, that he analyzed, that certain of those -- certain of the claims are embodied -- at least it's his opinion -- are embodied in certain of those -- those pants.
- Q. Uh-huh. And you're aware that Target has a technical expert in this case, Ms. Harder?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. Did Ms. Harder give an opinion saying that Mr. Brookstein was incorrect or wrong in his things. One is that I -- I would have that understanding because there's been no information to suggest that it -- it does exist. And I would also say that in certain respects -- and I don't recall if this specific claim is one of those, but even under Mr. Brookstein's analysis of the four pairs that he analyzed, many of the dependent claims were not -- did not exist -- were not covered or embodied within the pants that he analyzed.

Q. Let's talk about Claim -- Claim 6. Was -- was Claim 6 embodied in the pants that Mr. Brookstein analyzed and that Mr. Green relied upon?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

A. Again, I'm not here to -- to comment on the specific analysis set forth by Mr. Brookstein and whether it's -- it is or it isn't embodied in a particular pair of pants. I'd have to refer back to his report, though, in terms he's put -- he's provided information and hasn't given an indication as to whether a particular dependent claim is embodied in some of the pants or in -- within the pants that he has analyzed.

I'd have to go back and look at that. I don't -- I just don't recall specifically. Never

A. Well, let me just say that I'm responding to what Mr. Green has set forth, and I understand that the way in which he performed his analysis, not only doesn't it differentiate between the independent and dependent claims, but it doesn't account for certain other aspects of the sales of the products. So, whether --

So, on the one hand, the fact that he hasn't assessed the dependent claims separate, or at least the impact of the dependent, separate from the impact of the independent claim is one issue that I've addressed. And in addition to that, even if you want to assume -- to analyze it in a way that he's analyzed it, he's failed to consider many other factors, as well.

Q. Let me ask you, though, on -- let's take a look, for example, at Claim 6.

Do you have any reason to believe that the additional element recited in Claim 6 is not present in a significant percentage of Secret Fit products?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

having memorized that, but certainly would -- would want to refer back to his analysis and report.

- Q. If his report showed that all the pants that he analyzed met that additional element of Claim 6, how would that affect your analysis?
- A. Well, I don't know that it affects -- it doesn't change my analysis. It doesn't change my opinions.
 - Q. Why not?
- A. Because I -- I understood that -- would have understood that in performing my analysis if, in fact, that's the case. I'd have to go back again and look at his report, but either way, my analysis is what it is, and it doesn't change.
- Q. So, even if all the pants that were analyzed met Claim 6, and there's no evidence that there were pants sold by Destination Maternity of the Secret Fit label that don't meet the Claim -- Claim 6, even so, you would still give the same opinion?
 - A Well --

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

hypothetical --

Q. Well, I'm giving you a hypothetical.

A. Well, a hypothetical that I don't understand to be the case. I understand Mr. Brookstein analyzed four pairs of pants. I also understand that, even under his own analysis, many of the dependent claims did not exist within those pairs of pants. I don't know of any other analysis associated with the remaining portion of the population.

And as I've stated previously, I don't believe it would be appropriate to use what he's done and extrapolate it to the rest of the population, but even if you wanted to do that, it would suggest that the rest of the population, and those pairs of pants within the rest of the population, would not contain certain -- or would not embody certain of the dependent claims.

- Q. I think earlier you had mentioned that there was about in sales, the number you gave.
- A. Well, in terms of the -- the data that was provided over -- a little over a five-year period, I believe the -- the number -- the dollar sales were -- for Secret Fit Belly pants were

Q. Well, what -- what are those factors?

A. Again, you're asking me to -- to now name factors in a -- in a hypothetical that I don't have an understand of the specifics of what you're referring to. I don't know that you could automatically say that there's a laundry list. I think you have to assess each situation on its own merits and the appropriate facts and circumstances.

- Q. Well, when you assess the situation, what are you looking for?
- A. I'm -- I'm looking for what would be appropriate, depending on those facts and circumstances.
- Q. Well, you're -- you are presented here as an expert. As an expert, what -- what things would you want to assess?

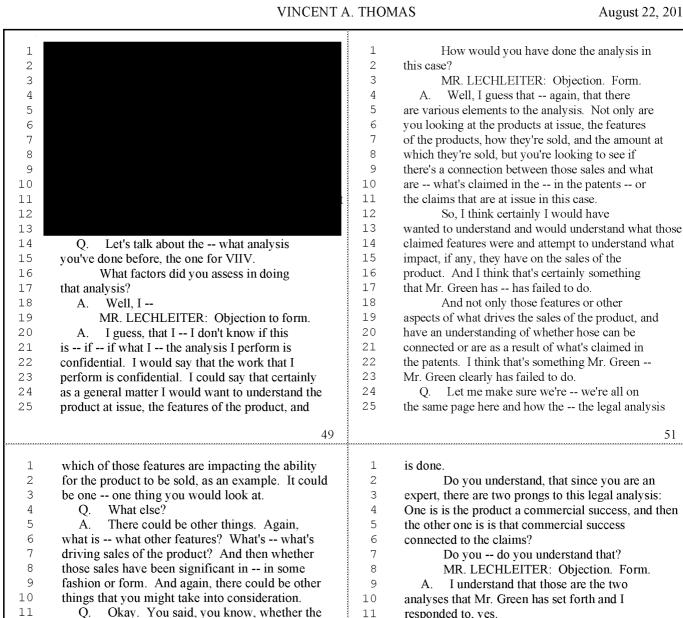

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection to form.

A. Again, I'm -- I'm -- you're asking me a very general hypothetical. I certainly am willing to respond and answer questions relative to the analysis I've set forth here, and what I think Mr. Green has failed to do. Happy to do that. Outside of that, again, you're -- you're painting a very general hypothetical that I don't know it would be appropriate to respond, that it's approximately somewhere in the vicinity of But what I want to ask you is by that did you mean annually or was that over -- over five years? It was over the five-plus years. Would you agree that normally a product over five years would be that sold considered a commercial success? MR. LECHLEITER: Objection to form. I -- I don't know that you could automatically conclude that to be the case, just given the information you just provided as a general matter.

12 (Pages 45 to 48)

CENTEXT LEGAL SERVICES 855.CENTEXT

Do you understand, that since you are an expert, there are two prongs to this legal analysis: One is is the product a commercial success, and then the other one is is that commercial success connected to the claims?

> Do you -- do you understand that? MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- A. I understand that those are the two analyses that Mr. Green has set forth and I responded to, yes.
- Q. Do you -- do you think that Mr. Green did that the wrong way, that it's not really a two-prong test?
- A. I -- again, I'm not here to provide legal opinions. I'm here to respond to what Mr. Green has set forth. And I would conclude that what he has done is deficient, and the basis upon which he's arrived in his opinions is deficient.
- Let's assume, for the sake of argument, that is -- that Mr. Green is correct that it's a two-prong analysis needed to determine if it's a commercial success and then whether or not it's a nexus. Let's just focus on the commercial success part of that. We'll get to the nexus later.

That's what I'm asking you. On what? Q.

Well, you know -- and I'm -- again, I'm A. not trying to be difficult, but you're asking me very general questions that would -- would require specific assessment of a specific industry or a specific situation. So, there could be things that one might look at to assess whether those sales were significant or not. It just depends on the situation.

All right. Well, here -- here you're Q. critiquing -- critiquing Mr. Green's analysis.

1 What would you do to show that the 1 be appropriate. Depends. 2 2 Secret Fit Belly product -- what would satisfy you When is it appropriate and when is it 3 3 that the Secret Fit Belly product was a commercial not appropriate? 4 4 success? Well, I think that it -- while you can 5 5 MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form. take a look at that, you need to analyze it in the 6 6 context in which the sales were made as I've said. Well, I think that, while you could look 7 7 at the sales of the product, you have to put them in And when you say patented versus non-patented, you 8 8 need to be more specific about the features of the proper context. 9 9 patented versus the features of the non-patented and Let me step back for a second. So, the Q. 10 10 first thing you would look at would be the sales of the difference is and what accounts for those 11 11 differences. the product? 12 12 That certainly could be one thing you What -- what do you mean by that? Q. Α. 13 13 Well, on the one hand, you could say I'm look at. A. 14 going to compare a patented product to, 14 And -- and what -- what are you looking Q. 15 for in the sales of the product? 15 quote/unquote, non-patented product, but the 16 How the products are sold, the level of 16 differences between those products could be in a A. number of areas, so making that comparison may be 17 sales. 17 18 So, you've identified two things. How 18 wholly irrelevant to the issue at hand. О. 19 they're sold; what do you mean by that? 19 O. Well, now, in this case we have Secret 20 Well, in terms of what is -- what is 20 Fit Belly products and non-Secret Fit Belly A. 21 driving the sale of those products. 21 products. Is that fair? 22 Ο. What -- why does that matter? 22 Well, I think that's what Mr. Green has 23 Well, it could be that you -- you have a 23 made a comparison to. 24 certain level of sales, but those sales were 24 Q. Okay. Do you have any -- any reason to 25 generated at the expense of, perhaps, other products 25 believe that there are not Secret Fit Belly products 55 1 and not Secret Fit Belly products? 1 in a very direct and concerted effort. Q. Okay. What -- what -- and then you also 2 2 MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form. 3 said "the level sold." 3 I don't have any reason to believe that A. That could be -- again, you'd -- you 4 4 there are -- that to be the case -- or that not --5 5 have -- I think you -- you could look at that, but that that's not the case 6 6 you need to put it in a proper context as well. And 7 you would -- you would also, I think, put it in the 7 8 context of not only just the level on how they are 8 9 sold, but how that compares to the marketplace; and 9 10 one thing you could look at would be market share. 10 11 O. Sure. Did you look at market share in 11 12 this case? 12 13 A. I responded to what Mr. Green did and he 13 14 failed to look at market share and said there was no 14 Okay. Is it your understanding that 15 such thing available. 15 what the patent covers is a panel that is expandable 16 Isn't one of the things that's normally 16 and covers the -- the belly area? 17 done in a commercial success analysis, on the 17 Well, I understand -- my -- and again, 18 commercial success part, isn't it typical to take a 18 I'm -- I want to be clear that I'm not making legal 19 look at sales of the patented product versus sales 19 conclusions and I'm not interpreting it from a legal 20 of non-patented product? 20 perspective. My understanding is that the 21 MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. 1 2 Q. Well, actually, the sales -- the total 3 sales exceeded those that have been made by 4 non-Secret Fit, correct? 5 Well, as it's defined as Secret Fit and 6 7 at the details, but there certainly is continued 8 sales, but those -- the decline in the all other 9 category could be as a result of things associated with the Secret Fit Belly and -- and one of those 10 11 things could be just lack of attention to the non-Secret Fit. And that -- and that -- in lieu of 12 13 14 may have been lower. 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 73 2 3 4 5 Let me ask you this. When a 6 company gives more attention to one product 7 versus another, isn't that consistent with 8 9 MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form. 10 It may and it may not. 11 Isn't the economics -- isn't it economic 12 thinking and economic logic that sellers try to 13 match buyers' demands for a product? 14 MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form. 15 I think, as a general matter, that's --16

all other. And again, I'd have to go back and look that, all others may have been higher and Secret Fit demand as opposed to demand -- consumers wanting that and that driving the change in the SKUs. I think you'd have to assess that further.

You've seen the marketing for the Secret Fit product, right?

Well, I've seen what Ms. Piccone has Α. testified to and the one document that Mr. Green relies upon, as well as any other information that I've reviewed as part of that.

I'm correct, though, that in the way that Destination Maternity markets Secret Fit products is that it touts that the products are patented and it touts the feature of reaching up to the breasts, if you will?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

Well, I -- you know, the -- in terms of the -- of that aspect, I think you'd have to be more specific in terms of what marketing is reflective of that, but I think, also, there are other things that are -- exist within the marketing of these products as well. Are they placed in the store, the branding, there's celebrity personalities associated with these products, the color, the style. You know, all those things can go into how the product is marketed.

that's correct.

Okay. And doesn't the fact that the Q. number of SKUs shifted to Secret Fit actually -isn't that consistent with being reflective -reflective of greater consumer demand for Secret Fit?

Well, I don't -- I guess that may be the case. It may not be. It may be that the choice to promote a product to try to drive that demand, but it may not be -- it may be that that drives the

So, and just to be clear, when you say "touting," can you be more specific in terms of what you're referring to?

Q. Sure. Maybe I can, but I...

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Something is wrong. MR. POLLACK: Yes.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: If you could put... the microphone... I think it's wrapped around your throat.

MR. POLLACK: Here you go.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: This is fine enough correction. This is top of the line.

MR. POLLACK: I'm going to mark as Thomas Deposition Exhibit 5, what's been referred to as Exhibit 205-1 in the proceeding.

(Thomas Deposition Exhibit 5 was marked for identification.)

(BY MR. POLLACK) You've seen this piece of marketing before, I assume?

I believe so, yes.

Okay. And the marketing -- am I correct, just looking at this, the marketing is directed at the genius behind Secret Fit Belly?

- I think certainly there are competitors in the market that have marketing capability. Target certainly perhaps may have marketing capability. Macy's is another example. Is -- there's no reason here to think that Destination Maternity is -- has more resources or is better at marketing than Target or its other competitors? MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.  - Do you think there is some respect in Q. which Destination Maternity has --
 - Well, just because -- I guess I would say that just because an organization is large doesn't necessarily mean that a smaller organization could do better in certain respects at marketing or touting or promoting a particular product in a particular aspect of the market. Well, the -- I guess what I can say is that of their -- they --

I haven't made that comparison

That's what I know.

Why do you think they do that? Why do they push the Secret Fit Belly pants over Non-Secret

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- They made a decision to do that. Α
- Yeah. But what -- what drives the O. decisions like that?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- Well, there can be, you know, certainly a number of things that could drive that decision. They want a particular product to succeed.
 - Consumer demand, is it often driven by you've seen, that these products are marketed to anyone else other than pregnant women?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- I -- I don't recall anything, but that doesn't mean that doesn't exist. I'd -- again, I haven't memorized every document that I've reviewed, but that doesn't mean that something doesn't exist in the record.
- Okay. As far as you -- you recall sitting here now, you don't recall anything either -- anything said by any of the witnesses or anyone else suggesting that Destination Maternity markets to anyone other than pregnant women?
- Again, I don't -- I don't recall anything as I -- as I sit here, but, again, I would have to look at the record to -- to be sure on that point. It doesn't mean something doesn't exist.
 - Something can always exist. Q.
 - I'm not sure that that's the case. Α.
- Q. Okay. Why not? Because you keep saying something can always -- can exist.
- Well, I'm just saying that you're asking me to interpret and respond to the entirety of the record that I've reviewed as to whether in any way, shape, or form the product's been promoted to

- somebody other than a pregnant female. And what I'm saying is that that may be the case. I can't say for certain as I sit here. I don't recall anything, but that doesn't mean that it doesn't exist. And I'd have to go back and -- as I understand, this is not a memory test and, you know, certainly I want to be responsive to your questions.

 Q. Okay. You'd agree with me, though, that if the market consists entirely of pregnant women,
- Q. Okay. You'd agree with me, though, that if the market consists entirely of pregnant women, unlike other markets that you've probably dealt with, assuming that the market consists entirely of pregnant women, there's a limit to the effect marketing can have because you can't expand beyond a certain customer base?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- A. If you're saying that -- that you have no intention of marketing to anyone other than pregnant women, I would say that there's a finite number, if you will, of those women. And depending on what market you're referring to, whether it's U.S., international, or whatever the case may be.
 - Q. In this case --
- A. And it may be women who are pregnant, but it also, I guess, can include women who intend to get pregnant and may have a need at some future

- A. Those can be goals of marketing a product and, I guess, that from my perspective and my experience, the primary goal would it -- to be to increase your share in a particular market. I don't know that marketing is necessarily intended to increase the size of a market, typically, but -- while that could be the case, but I think in terms of just in my experience and the impact of marketing, what you're attempting to accomplish, the primary goal would have to be to increase your size of the share of the market.
- Q. So you're not aware that -- for example, you've worked in a pharmaceutical market -- you're not aware that in the pharmaceutical market usually the main goal is to increase the market size to make doctors aware that the treatment exists?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

A. Well, again, that -- that -- that might be an objective. To be fair, that might be an objective of marketing, but it also can be the case that certain treatments only affect a certain population that has a particular disease or -- or condition. And the goal can also be to increase treating patients within that population or that market.

point.

- Q. That's a finite number of people within a particular time period as well?
- A. I guess, I -- you, perhaps, could analyze it in that fashion.
- Q. So, that's different from many other markets where marketing and marketing's effect has been analyzed where one of the key goals of marketing, except in the pharmaceutical market, is to expand the customer base beyond the number of customers that are currently in the base?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- A. I think -- I think that's a -- I would, I guess, tend to disagree with that -- that characterization because you're somehow suggesting that marketing is only meant to increase the size of a market. Marketing, in my mind, is meant to increase your share of a particular market, is one thing that it could do. So, I think that I would disagree, respectfully, with how you characterized that last question.
- Q. Perhaps I put my question inartfully. So, in most markets marketing has two goals: To increase market share and to increase overall market size. Is that fair?

So, even if you're trying to reach physicians, there is, in many cases, only a certain finite number of patients that would actually have a need for a particular treatment. So, the goal would be to increase the share of those patients that are being treated with that particular product.

Q. You would agree with me, though, that in the maternity pants market there isn't an issue that customers are unaware of the existence and availability of maternity pants?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- A. I don't know that that necessarily is the case. I don't know that you can draw that conclusion.
- Q. Okay. So you think that certain pregnant women in the United States are not aware that there's a product called maternity pants that they could buy for their pregnancy?
 - A. They may not.
- Q. Let's go back to the -- to the article, Thomas Deposition Exhibit 3. I'm not -- I'm, again, going to look at the second page under indicators of commercial success.
 - A. Okay.
 - Q. And I'm going to move one sentence

I'm not offering an opinion as to a A. specific style that does that. I would, again, go back to the analysis that I've done on the number of SKUs.

Let me ask you about that number of SKUs. Economically, as an economist, when the market demands, let's say, the Secret Fit feature, wouldn't it then make sense, economically, for a seller to reduce the number of SKUs of the ret Fit products that don't have the desired Isn't that how economics works and isn't the economic divers would look?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- Not necessarily. I mean, styles change ie. That may or may not be the case.
- You have any evidence that the style has over the time period in this case than on es available before?
- Well, I understand that the styles in arel do change and change each year. And I and that the number of SKUs offered for the ret Fit has diminished while the number of or the Secret Fit has increased.

Uh-huh.

And it could very well be that those or the Secret Fit are different styles that ver offered for the non-Secret Fit or weren't e in the marketplace for the non-Secret Fit.

Okay. You said --

Wouldn't it be the case that if the market demand was for the Secret Fit pant, that it would be consistent with commercial success and the nexus to the Secret Fit feature that the number of SKUs, then, of non-Secret Fit would be expected to go down --

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection.

Q. Why would it not be the case? Why would a seller continue to sell products which are less in demand and continue to maintain the same number of SKUs or increase the number of SKUs?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

A. I guess I'm not -- that question, I'm not sure I understand.

Q. Well, it seems to me, just based on logic, if I'm selling two products, one with a feature that customers really want and another one -- another type of product with a feature that the customers are less interested in, that once I see that over time, what I will do, as a rational actor, is I would decrease the number of styles I have available that don't have that feature that seems to be driving demand and would increase the number of styles that have the desired feature; wouldn't that -- isn't that what a rational actor would do?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

A. But you're assuming that it's that feature that's driving demand and driving the change in the number of SKUs. Again, I don't know that you can ultimately conclude from the information that's been provided that that's the case. So, I -- you're asking a hypothetical that may or may not be the

- Q. Well, I don't think I was surmising and speculating here. I think we -- we can both agree that there are non-Secret Fit and Secret Fit, though, panel SKUs, correct?
 - A. That's correct.
- Q. And I think we can both agree that economics must drive -- whether the people at Destination Maternity understand that or not, economics fundamentally must drive the reasons that Destination Maternity has reduced non-Secret Fit SKUs and has increased Secret Fit SKUs?

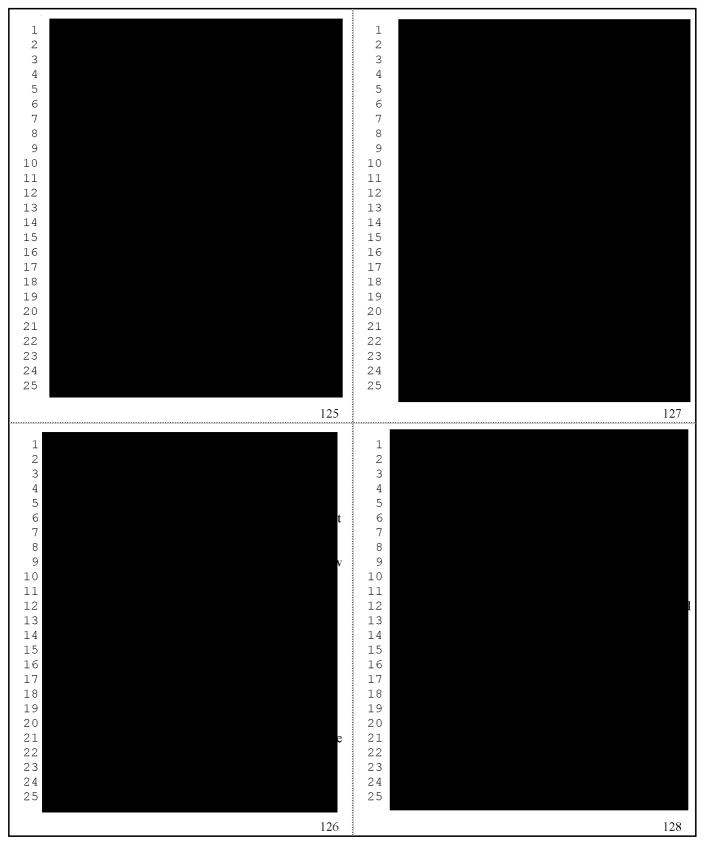

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- A. Again, that -- that -- that perhaps could be the case that economics is driving that.
- Q. Right. Isn't economics what drives all commercial transactions? It's the science of that.
- A. I mean, it -- I guess you could also say that there can be situations where it's not economically -- maybe not in the economic interest but for other strategic purposes or other reasons why you may do something.
 - Q. Sure. But the -- when we're talking

You're trying to make a connection for which I don't think you have a basis to necessarily make that connection. You're just asking one thing. Can you assume it leads to another? Q. Yeah. A. I don't I don't I guess, I don't maybe I just don't understand your question. But you're asking to make a leap without any further information or connection being made between the two things you're asking me to compare. Q. Okay. So, what you're saying is there really isn't a connection between customer preferences and the volume of sales for a product and the amount of product inventory that would be in the store? A. I mean, that that that could could I'm not first of all, you're mischaracterizing my testimony. And secondly, that could be the case in the abstract as a general matter. But you're trying to take that and specifically apply it to the situation in this case, and that's where I'm I'm the disconnect is.	decided that's what they want to push and sell. So they have more of that product to push and sell are offer to their customers and make sure that their customers see that product. Q. I guess, in order to make that conclusion, I'd guess, you would have to conclude that stores make decisions about what products to sell that are disconnected from customer demands MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form. A. I don't know that you have to come to that conclusion either. Q. I mean, isn't it the case as a matter of logic, nevermind economics, that the store is goin to stock more of the products that consumers wan A. That may be the case. And it may be that they're stocking product that ultimately they want to sell. And maybe customers won't desire those. Or maybe they're only desiring them becauthey're doing more to push those products to the consumer and not offering other products. Q. Let's take a look at your quote of 309. So, in your bullet point, your second bullet point in Paragraph 43, you cite to 309 to suggest that

So, what you're saying is economic analysis doesn't work by starting from theories that are taught in the textbooks and then trying to apply that to the real world; instead, there's something else you're supposed to do? MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form. A. I would say that what you're attempting to do is to make general observations and somehow use that to support a specific instance or circumstance. I think it's dangerous and likely inappropriate because every situation is different, and the facts and circumstances are different in every situation. It's not a one size fits all, and I think to do that is inappropriate and to form a basis based on that is inappropriate as well. Q. What about logic? I mean, doesn't logic dictate just basic logic, that consumers are demanding and purchasing one kind of product in much higher quantity and, therefore, the store selling that product is going to have a lot more of the product that the consumers want? I'm goin to start at Line 8 and read down to Line 17 to finish your answer. Did I read that correctly? A. You did. Q. Okay. And isn't it what she's saying there, that maternity pants, bottoms are the key initiative, correct? MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form. A. She's saying how bottoms is our number one key initiative at Destination Maternity. That's deposition testimony that you cite, 254-256?

And can you tell me where in there she distinguishes between markdowns of Secret Fit versus non-Secret Fit.

- A. I think that she is referring to Jessica -- Jessica Simpson pants, which I think is the only Secret Fit.
- Q. You're talking about in just that portion of answer, beginning at 254. But let's take a look where she is talking about markdowns. It's on 256.
 - A. Okay.

- Q. And when they are -- in that question about markdowns, does it mention anything about Jessica Simpson?
- A. Well, it -- it -- it talks about it on 54, running every days promotions.
- Q. Yes. It says their bottoms are so important to us every days. It doesn't say Jessica Simpson's bottoms, does it?
- A. In -- she says the one may or may not be Jessica.
- Q. All right. There's no -- no distinction here being made between Secret Fit and non-Secret Fit?

unrelated to the patented feature. And the point is that Mr. Green failed to acknowledge or recognize or review this testimony or further investigate that issue. So, the point I'm making is that that -- this -- this initiative could be driving sales, and it's unrelated to the claims that are at issue in this case.

Q. I understand it could be driving sales. But how is it driving sales toward Secret Fit and away from non-Secret Fit? That's what I'm asking.

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

A. Well, I guess that it would -- I'm using this in terms of showing the -- the success -- in terms of Mr. Green's opinion as to the level of sales of Secret Fit Belly products, which he uses as the basis, not to say that the Secret Fit Belly products are a commercial success. And I'm merely pointing out that there are certain marketing events or impacts. He says that there's nothing based on one sentence and one document, that there's nothing going on. And what I'm acknowledging and identifying is that within Ms. Piccone's deposition she's identified instances and events that could affect those sales. And that's something Mr. Green has failed to acknowledge.

A. Well, to the excellent that it's Jessica Simpson, my understanding is that that's only Secret Fit and not non-Secret Fit.

Q. It says here, on 254, if that's where

Q. Okay. Well, let me ask you this. If you're doing markdown promotions on both Secret Fit and non-Secret Fit products, how does that in any way help you, if at all, in showing that there's some difference in marketing between Secret Fit and non-Secret Fit products?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

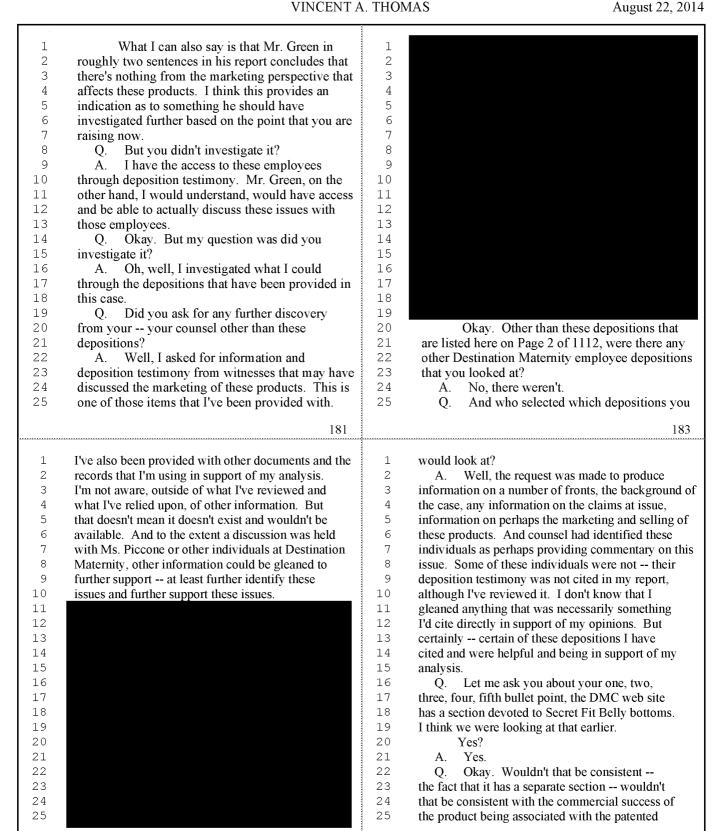

A. Well, I guess the issue is what is -what ultimately is driving the sales. And there appear to be initiatives, markdowns that are Q. Well, I understand how this could affect maybe overall sales of pants, but I don't understand as how could it affect or make a distinction between Secret Fit and non-Secret Fit pants?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

- A. Well, I think that -- that it could, to the extent that such promotions apply more so to Secret Fit versus non-Secret Fit, and I think that's something that Mr. Green should have investigated or at least inquired about. But certainly, Ms. Piccone acknowledges that those things exist, and those things can affect the level of sales of the Secret Fit product.
- Q. Sure. You don't have any evidence that there was greater promotions -- you mention this is a possibility, but you don't have any evidence that there were promotional differences between the Secret Fit and non-Secret Fit products?
- A. Well, what I'm saying is that I'm using this to show that there are things that affected or could have affected the sales of Secret Fit Belly pants as part of my declaration. If you're asking me whether it affected it more so for Secret Fit Belly or non-Secret Fit, that may have been the case.

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form. A. Well, I it the patented feature could be something driving a price differential, but it may not. And that price differential for two comparat two products that you are comparing could be driven by something completely unrelated to the patented feature. And again, it's also important to point out that, while there may be a price premium, ultimately the profitability of the product could be lower even though the price is higher. Q. Have you seen any evidence could there possibly be any reason why are these products, Secret Fit Belly panel versus non-Secret Fit, that the Secret Fit panels would have a lower profitability than the non-Secret Fit panel? MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form. A. They could, yes, because the the only

1 1 2 Q. Okay. And that's a very different 2 3 3 market and very different analysis in looking at 4 4 retail. And I recognize Mr. Green included it, 5 5 may be he shouldn't have, in his numbers. But that 6 6 -- that wholesale market is a very different market 7 7 from the retail. Is that fair? 8 8 Well, I would say that there are Α. 9 9 differences between the wholesale and retail market, 10 10 first. And I would say, secondly, that if you are 11 11 suggesting that he's made an error then as it 12 12 relates to the Kohl's product, he can't use that as 13 a price differential as the basis to conclude that 13 14 there's commercial success that's associated with 14 15 the sales of those products. If that's what you --15 16 If we took out the Kohl's products, you 16 17 recognize that the price premium is only going to 17 18 increase from the numbers he provided? 18 19 If we're looking at overall averages, 19 20 that those numbers would change, that's correct. 20 21 But I'm not sure that that's a relevant way of -- of 21 22 viewing the world as it relates to commercial 22 23 success. 23 24 Q. in the wholesale market you'll agree with me that Kohl's pays a price premium of percent, effectively?

> A. Well, I would agree that on average across all the pants that are sold, which could be differing brands for Secret Fit Belly, that there is a difference in the average price. I don't know that it necessarily equates to the price premium because you would need to look at the specific brands that you are comparing. But on average, under indicators of commercial success. Do you see that it says commonly used indicators of commercial success include and the third one is price premiums, right?

That that word -- those words are on A. this page on this exhibit.

Okay. So am I correct that price premiums is an indicator of commercial success? MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

Again, I think we went round and around perhaps on this issue or maybe others. Again, you're asking a very general question. It may or may not be an indication. And it could very well be in this case it's not an indication of commercial success

Well, what's -- the thing I see you're Q. doing here is -- we've gone through a pretty large number of these -- of these indicators -- well, it may not be an indicator of commercial success, but we've gone through sales, sales growth, price premiums, displacement of product. If we were to look at these, all in the aggregate though, and say, well, every one of these is present, and perhaps it using this data, there is a differential in the price of which is percent.

Maybe I'm misunderstanding how price Q. premiums are done. In all the cases that I've been in, the way you do a price premium is you look at all products sold with the feature. And then you look at all the products sold without the feature. And then you take the difference between those average prices. Is -- has that been done in a wrong way in the cases I've been in?

MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

Well, again, I think you're being very general in your approach in assuming that generally speaking that would apply in every situation. You can have a product that is alleged to embody the patent and one that's not alleged to embody the patent. But there could be dramatic differences otherwise or in addition to those products. And making that comparison would be inappropriate. And to say and conclude that that's a price premium associated with the patented feature I think would be inappropriate.

Okay. But here what we have is two kinds of products, non-Secret Fit Belly products which came in an enormous panoply of styles, and Secret Fit products which came in a very similar and fairly overlapping enormous panoply of styles. Would it be fair to say that it would be appropriate in that kind of situation to take an aggregate of all the products that are Secret Fit or the patented products and then compare them to all the products across the board that are non-Secret Fit and see if they are -- if on average there's a price premium?

A. Again, you're presenting a hypothetical that I don't -- I don't understand to be the case when you talk about a panoply of styles. And it's clear that the number of SKUs for non-Secret Fit has declined over time, and Secret Fit has increased. Generalizing and taking averages based on some general theory or understanding I think is inappropriate without digging into the details and understanding what it all means. So, I would disagree with the premise of your question.

as to what I'm trying to say.

Uh-huh. So why don't you explain it to me, then.

A. I don't understand your question, and I -- my testimony is what it is. But certainly I think you've mischaracterized or attempted to mischaracterize what I've testified to. And --

Well, how have I mischaracterized it? MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

I don't know. You asked a very, very A. lengthy question that I honestly just don't understand.

Q. Let me break it down. So, in his report Mr. Green pointed to significant sales levels, significant sales growth, price premiums, increase in sales of Secret Fit products from 2008 to 2013, decrease of sales of non-Secret Fit products from 2008 to 2013. Is that fair?

I don't think that's fair. I mean, if vou look at his disclosure, he identifies sales --

O. Uh-huh.

-- and he puts a graph in to the report of sales of Secret Fit. And he identifies sales of non-Secret Fit. He doesn't do and conclude what you say he's concluding. That's not included in his

> Let me ask you this. Am I correct that effectively what you're saying is -- well, Mr. Green has shown significant sales levels -- significant sales growth, price premiums, and that Secret Fit products went way up in sales between '08 and 2013, while non-Secret Fit products went way down in sales during the same period. But given -- despite showing all those factors, he needed to show -prove the following negatives that it could not have been done due to other factors, such as marketing promotion, some other unspecified feature of the product that no one in this case has never mentioned or something else that none of us has never thought of?

> > MR. LECHLEITER: Objection. Form.

With all due respect, and it's getting late in the day, that was a very lengthy question, and I think an attempt to mischaracterize all the testimony I've given previously in this deposition declaration.

Q. You're saying that when he plots a graph on Page 16 of Secret Fit sales going from, I don't know, about , that doesn't show sales growth?

Well, it -- it -- he hasn't said there's Α -- you said significant sales growth.

O. Yes.

There's a starting point to these sales. And he hasn't been provided with all the details of all the sales. And I think I've testified to this previously. And all the information hasn't been provided to him. So, you're -- you're characterizing his testimony in a way that's not disclosed in what he has in his declaration.

Let me read what he writes. "Secret Fit Belly bottom sales have increased as non-patented product sales have decreased."

Okay. That's what he says.

Okay. So doesn't that -- isn't that the same thing, unless my understanding of English has somehow deteriorated, as showing significant sales growth of Secret Fit Belly bottoms and decrease of non-Secret Fit Belly bottoms?

in doing so accounting for and acknowledging other things that would also have accounted for -- or perhaps could have accounted for that commercial success. That's my understanding of what he needs to do.

Q. So, when you did your analysis, you were using that understanding?

Well, when I did my analysis, I was A. responding to what Mr. Green did and what he failed to do. And you're asking a hypothetical that I don't understand to be the case. So, when you start weighing into my analysis, I did this or I did that, you're painting a hypothetical that I don't understand to be the case. Not only do I -- I don't understand that it's necessarily proven that Claim 6 is embodied in the Secret Fit pants that Mr. Green has analyzed. But even under Destination Maternity's Mr. Brookstein's analysis, he's only -he's only analyzed four pairs of pants. And that -those four pairs of pants were provided to him. He has no idea how they were selected, which indicates the sample that he is looking at could be a biased sample and not representative of a population. And in any event, even what he analyzed, most of those pants do not embody many of the dependent claims -- have you done cases where the products are sold under a large number of SKUs?

A. The products are sold what?

Q. Under a large number of SKUs.

A. Yes

Q. What -- what cases have you done?

A. Well, I've worked -- I've done a lot of work with Amway.

Q. Okay.

A. As an example.

Q. What kind of products for Amway?

A. Amway sells a lot of things, vitamins, energy drinks, candidly, you name it, they sell it.

Q. In the cases you did though, what kind of products were they?

A. Oh, it would -- it would have been most if not all the products they sell. We were analyzing information from their -- their -- each of their independent business operators.

Q. Was that for patent case or was it for a different kind of analysis?

A. It was -- it was not a patent case.

Q. Have you ever done damages or any other economic analysis for a patent case where the product had a very -- was sold under a large number that are at issue in this case. So, I don't -- again, you're -- you're painting a hypothetical that I don't understand to be the case and that the information that's been produced or identified in this case wouldn't support. So, I don't want necessarily my testimony on your hypothetical to somehow be connected to something I did in this case.

Cusc.

Q. It's never came up in any of your cases?
A. I'd have to think back. That may or may not be the case.

Q. Have you done a lot of cases where the

A. I would have to -- I'd have to think about that. It might be the case. I'd -- I'd have to think about that.

Q. If we look at your CV 11 - 11, there you list the cases -- would that help you recall any cases, patent cases involving a large number of SKUs?

A. Oh, patent cases. Keep in mind that these are the cases that I provided deposition and/or trial testimony only in the past four years.

Q. Okay.

A. There's certainly would -- could be other cases for which I have not provided either deposition or trial testimony either in the last four years or that I've provided such testimony in the periods prior to the last four years. And we talked about -- we talked about the Levi's Strauss case, which would include a number of SKUs, but that was not a patent case. The Pergo, Inc. Case may have included a number of SKUs. That was a flooring case. Sofpool v. Intex Recreation involved a number of inflatable swimming pools that could have included a number of SKUs. Joovy v. Baby Trend, Inc.
