1	THE CLERK: All rise.
2	THE COURT: All right. Please be
3	seated.
4	Good afternoon. I believe we're
5	going to have some argument now on the trial that
6	we just had. And I take it that the defendants
7	will go first because it's their burden; right?
8	MR. LEE: That's right, Your Honor.
9	THE COURT: All right. Mr. Lee.
10	MR. LEE: May it please the Court.
11	It seems like just yesterday, I was delivering my
12	opening argument.
13	The sole issues in the case are the
14	obviousness or not of Claim 7 and 16 of the '031
15	patent in view of the prior art and whether those
16	claims are obvious variants of the claims of the
17	'176 patent, and therefore, invalid for double
18	patenting.
19	THE COURT: And it's not my
20	intention to interrupt either counsel during
21	closings, notwithstanding what I'm doing now, but
22	I do have one question which you know what, I
23	may have some questions when you're done, so
24	MR. LEE: Okay.

1	THE COURT: don't take my just
2	sitting here as being lack of interest. Okay?
3	MR. LEE: All right. To prove
4	obviousness of these claims, Noven does not have
5	to prove that the use of every antioxidant listed
6	in Claim 16 was obvious, but just that any one of
7	them was. It does not have to prove that every
8	amount of antioxidant within the claim scope of
9	Claim 7 was obvious, but just that some amount of
10	antioxidant falling within the claim of the scope
11	was obvious. It does not have to prove that
12	every transdermal patch or every method of
13	establishing a rivastigmine formulation was
14	obvious, but only that at least one formulation
15	was obvious. And Noven has done that.
16	Plaintiffs have not contested in
17	this case that GB '040 would be a proper starting
18	point for further development of a rivastigmine
19	transdermal patch. Dr. Kydonieus explained why.
20	By 1997, an oral dosage form of
21	rivastigmine taken two or three times a day was
22	already in clinical trials, had been shown to be
23	safe, effective and well tolerated and better
24	than the existing drug. However, it was not

1 better than the competition, which only required 2 a single dose per day. 3 GB '040 teaches that a transdermal 4 device would be preferable since it could be 5 applied once a day or even less often. 6 Therefore, there was a motivation to develop a 7 transdermal delivery system containing 8 rivastigmine in 1998 and GB '040 was the place to 9 start. 10 I think we have narrowed the issues 11 somewhat. Plaintiffs do not contest, that I have heard, that GB '040 taught a transdermal patch, 12 13 that it taught a therapeutically effective amount 14 of rivastigmine or that it was routine to 15 determine the amount of antioxidant for use in a particular formulation. 16 17 They do not contest or they do not 18 contend that GB '040 contained any stability 19 data. They do not contend that the transdermal 20 patch disclosed in GB '040 had a release liner or 21 the typical packaging of a transdermal system. 22 And, therefore, one of ordinary skill in the art 23 would have had to further develop the formulation 24 of GB '040 into a commercial product.
