(57) ABSTRACT

A system for upgrading a mobile communications terminal includes a first computer and a database coupled to the first computer. The database contains a plurality of mobile communications terminal software items. The system also includes a second computer and a network having a first node and second node. The first computer is connected to the first node, and the second computer is connected to the second node. The plurality of mobile communications terminal software items of the database is accessible to the second computer over the network. The second computer is adapted to upgrade the mobile communications terminal by supplying it with at least a particular software item among the plurality of mobile communications terminal software items.
