(57) ABSTRACT

A portable telephone set equipped with a telephone function equivalent to that of a mobile phone includes a display section, on which one or more selection items in addition to various displays are displayed, and key switches for an input operation. Its main body is provided with a mouse type input section capable of selecting the selection items displayed on the display section. The mouse type input section has the structure similar to that of a track ball type mouse or an optical mouse for a personal computer, and is disposed at the bottom, back or side surface of the main body integrally with the main body.
