Sauder wins innovation awards for Trey chair

Staff Staff -- Furniture Today, October 1, 2007

Sauder Mfg., the contract division of Sauder Woodworking, has won a pair of awards for its first plastic product, a convertible chair called Trey.

Trey converts from a standard task chair to a floor rocker and rolling tray, footrest, or stool. The chair has been designed for those who live in compact spaces.

Trey won honors in two key categories at the 2007 Plastic Parts Innovation Conference and New Product Design Competition earlier this year. Conference attendees awarded it the People's Choice Award, and the product also took the Retail and Consumer Category Award.
