Evan D. Diamond is an associate in the Life Sciences Intellectual Property practice of Paul Hastings. Mr. Diamond's practice focuses on patent litigation matters in the fields of pharmaceuticals and biotechnology. Mr. Diamond has represented clients in federal district court litigations, in appeal proceedings before the Federal Circuit, and in inter partes review proceedings before the Patent Trials and Appeals Board. In addition, Mr. Diamond has provided strategic counseling to clients regarding potential litigation and other patent-related matters.

Experience

Galderma Laboratories, L.P. and Supernus Pharmaceuticals, Inc.: Patent infringement litigation relating to the rosacea treatment Oracea®. Successfully upheld validity of longest-running patent covering Oracea® in federal district court, followed by a per curiam affirmance by the Federal Circuit. Successfully obtained preliminary injunction precluding generic launch prior to patent expiration. Continued to defend against subsequent challenges to patents covering Oracea® in federal district court and in inter partes review proceedings.

Eisai Inc.: Patent infringement litigation regarding Targretin®, a treatment for cutaneous T-cell lymphoma.

Forest Laboratories, Inc. and Merz Pharmaceuticals GmbH: Patent infringement litigation relating to Alzheimer's disease treatment Namenda®.
