PART I

ITEM 1. BUSINESS

GENERAL DEVELOPMENT OF BUSINESS

Allergan, Inc. ("Allergan" or the "Company") is a global provider of specialty therapeutic products principally in the areas of eye and skin care. Its worldwide consolidated revenues are generated by prescription and non-prescription pharmaceutical products in the areas of ophthalmology and dermatology, intraocular lenses (IOLs) and other ophthalmic surgical products, and contact lens care products.

Allergan was incorporated in California in 1948 and reincorporated in Delaware in 1977. In 1980, the Company was acquired by SmithKline Beckman Corporation (then known as "SmithKline Corporation" and herein "SmithKline"). The Company operated as a wholly-owned subsidiary of SmithKline from 1980 until July 27, 1989 when Allergan again became a stand-alone public company through a spin-off distribution by SmithKline.

During the fourth quarter of 1991, the Company divested its computer-based ophthalmic diagnostic instrument business, Allergan Humphrey. In November 1992, the Company sold its contact lens business in North and South America.

ALLERGAN BUSINESSES

The following table sets forth, for the periods indicated, the net sales from continuing operations for each of the Company's specialty therapeutics businesses:

Specialty Pharmaceuticals

Allergan develops, manufactures and markets a broad range of prescription ophthalmic products designed to treat diseases and disorders of the eye, including glaucoma, inflammation, infection, allergy and ophthalmic muscle disorders. In addition, the specialty over-the-counter ("OTC") product line consists of products designed to treat ocular surface disease, including artificial tears and ocular decongestants.

The largest segment of the market for ophthalmic prescription drugs is for the treatment of glaucoma, a sight-threatening disease characterized by elevated intraocular pressure. For initial treatment of glaucoma, Allergan sells BETAGAN(R) ophthalmic solution, a beta adrenergic blocking agent; BETAGAN(R) is Allergan's largest selling pharmaceutical product. PROPINE(R) ophthalmic solution is the product which is used alone or in combination with other drugs when initial drug therapy for glaucoma becomes inadequate. Patent is expected to develop in 1994. In 1993, Allergan entered into an agreement with Schein Pharmaceutical, Inc. whereby Schein will market generic versions of certain Allergan products that are off-patent in the U.S.; in March 1994, Schein began marketing a generic version of BETAGAN(R). Also in March 1994, Bausch & Lomb announced that it had obtained approval from the United States Food and Drug Administration ("FDA") to market a generic version of BETAGAN(R).

Allergan holds a major share of the U.S. market for ophthalmic steroids. The Company's PRED FORTE(R) product is widely prescribed to fight ocular inflammation.

In 1993, Allergan entered into a strategic alliance with Fisons Corporation to co-promote certain ophthalmic pharmaceuticals in the United States. The alliance currently involves Allergan's ACULAR(R) 1 ophthalmic solution for the relief of itch associated with seasonal allergic conjunctivitis. Later, under the terms of the alliance, co-promotion is planned to expand to include Fisons' OPTICROM(R) 2 ophthalmic solution and nedocromil sodium ophthalmic solution.

Allergan's specialty pharmaceuticals include BOTOX(R) (Botulinum Toxin Type A) purified neurotoxin complex for the treatment of certain neuromuscular disorders which are characterized by involuntary muscle contractions or spasms. BOTOX(R) purified neurotoxin complex is being marketed in the United States, Canada, Germany, France, Italy, New Zealand and a number of other countries for the treatment of blepharospasm (the uncontrollable abnormal contraction of the eyelid muscles which can force the eye closed) and strabismus (misalignment of the eyes) in people 12 years of age and over. In March 1991, an application was filed with United States FDA for approval of a nonophthalmic claim for an indication related to a neck and shoulder neuromuscular disorder known as cervical dystonia (torticollis). Allergan has been asked to provide supplemental clinical data to support the torticollis filing.

Building upon its strength in marketing to medical specialties and taking advantage of synergies in research and development, Allergan's skin care division (known as Allergan Herbert) develops, manufactures and markets a line of therapeutic skin care products primarily to dermatologists in the United States. Its product line includes GRIS-PEG(R) tablets, a systemic anti-fungal product, ELIMITE(R) cream for the treatment of scabies and NAFTIN(R), a topical anti-fungal gel and cream.

(1)ACULAR(R) is a registered trademark, which is licensed from Syntex (U.S.A.) Inc.

(2)OPTICROM(R) is a registered trademark of Fisons Corporation.

Surgical

Allergan's surgical division (known as Allergan Medical Optics or AMO) develops, manufactures and markets intraocular lenses (IOLs), surgically related pharmaceuticals, phacoemulsification equipment and other ophthalmic surgical products.

The largest segment of the surgical market is for the treatment of cataracts. IOLs are used to replace the natural lens of a cataract patient when it has become clouded. To meet the wide range of IOL products demanded by the market, Allergan currently offers a variety of models, including rigid
