Systems and techniques are disclosed for framing and processing single-carrier and/or OFDM transmit-diversity transmissions through delay-spread channels, as well as for deframing and processing the corresponding merged signals, received from a plurality of antennas, to estimate the transmitted information. Time-domain processing techniques may be used for both types of transmissions to create multiplexed dual signal-unit pairs, particularly when cyclic prefixes are needed to reduce delay-spreading effects. Repetitive pilot words may be employed in burst preambles and/or in payloads of transmission bursts to minimize or provide flexibility in the amount of bandwidth that is consumed to generate good channel response estimates under changing channel conditions.
