ABOUT D-LIB MAGAZINE

D-Lib Magazine is an electronic publication with a focus on digital library research and development, including new technologies, applications, and contextual social and economic issues. D-Lib Magazine appeals to a broad technical and professional audience. The primary goal of the magazine is timely and efficient information exchange for the digital library community to help digital libraries be a broad interdisciplinary field, and not a set of specialties that know little of each other.

The Corporation for National Research Initiatives (CNRI) is making D-Lib Magazine available for the advancement of knowledge and practice on digital library research and related matters. Funding was previously provided by the US Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) under Grant No. N66001-98-1-8908, by the National Science Foundation (NSF) under Grant No. IIS-0243042, and by the D-Lib Alliance and other contributors.

Opinions presented in D-Lib Magazine articles and reports are the opinions of the authors. They do not necessarily reflect the views of D-Lib Magazine, its publisher, the Corporation for National Research Initiatives, or the D-Lib Alliance.

Articles and the shorter pieces are solicited or selected from among unsolicited submissions. If you would like to contribute to D-Lib Magazine, or if you have any questions and comments about the magazine, please send e-mail to <editor@dlib.org>.

PRIVACY STATEMENT

D-Lib is an Internet-based magazine with a world-wide audience, committed to providing its readers with digital library-related articles licensed by authors for publication. The Corporation for National Research Initiatives (CNRI), which produces the magazine, does not collect personally identifying information about individuals who visit this web site. Our logs collect and store only domain names; dates and times of visits; the pages visited; and types of browsers used. Data from the logs are used to measure the number of visitors to the site.

Subscribers may join and leave the subscriber list using an automated maillist program. The subscriber list is used solely by the Editor to notify subscribers about site updates and/or the release of new issues. The subscriber list is not provided to any third parties, nor can subscribers post messages to the list.

Readers may decide to send email to the Editor containing comments about the magazine, in which they may include personally identifying information. That information is used only to enable the Editor to respond. However, D-Lib Magazine also welcomes formal "Letters to the Editor" related to particular stories or digital library research and electronic publishing issues, intended to be published in subsequent issues of the magazine and which may identify the sender.

CNRI does not control the privacy policies of any other sites to which we provide hyperlinks. Voluntarily disclosing personal information on sites hyperlinked to or from D-Lib Magazine would be done at your own risk.

D-Lib Magazine is produced by Corporation for National Research Initiatives (CNRI).
Prior to April 2006, the magazine was sponsored by the Defense Advanced Research Project Agency (DARPA) on behalf of the Digital Libraries Initiative under Grant No. N66001-98-1-8908, and by the National Science Foundation (NSF) under Grant No. IIS-0243042.
