3PR Request (request for reexamination filed 02 March 2012)

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 91, 97, and 99 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sebastian in view of Kawashima.

These rejections are adopted substantially as proposed by 3PR in 3PR Request.

Regarding claims 91, 97, and 99, Sebastian discloses a method comprising:

receiving a data block, wherein the data block is included in a data stream (column 1, lines 19-23);

outputting the data block in a compressed form (column 3, lines 31-36; column 5, lines 14-18);

wherein outputting the data block in the compressed form comprises determining whether to compress the data block with content dependent data compression based on the type of the data block (column 2, lines 1-42; column 5, lines 14-18; column 6, lines 22-40) or to compress the data block with a single data compression encoder (i.e., Sebastian discloses a generic compression system; column 1, lines 55-60; column 4, lines 9-20).

Further regarding claims 91, 97, and 99, Sebastian does not disclose determining whether to output the data block in received form or in a compressed form; and outputting the data block in received form or the compressed form based on the determination.

However, Kawashima teaches a system that is related to the one described by Sebastian, including data compression, and further teaches determining whether to output the data block in received form (i.e., as “pre-compression data”) or in a compressed form; and outputting the data block in received form or the compressed form based on the determination (column 29, lines 43-67; column 30, lines 1-23).

Regarding claims 91, 97, and 99, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art to output the data block in received form or in compressed form based on a determination as taught by Kawashima in the method disclosed by Sebastian in order to ensure that resources are used for compression only when compression would be effective.

Further regarding claim 91 in particular, Sebastian discloses compressing the data block to provide the data block in the compressed form in accordance with the determination whether to compress the data block with content dependent data compression or the single data compression encoder, wherein the data block in the compressed form is provided by a lossy compression technique (e.g., when “some data loss may be acceptable” or when some precision
