ABOUT THE COVER

The Apostle Paul (oil on canvas 51 3/4 x 41 1/2)
Paul seems to have fascinated Rembrandt in 1627 in a painting of Saint Paul in Prison. Probably executed with at least some post-Rembrandt's later style. In his earlier work, there is an identifiable environment, and the atmosphere there is no sense of a particular setting, on the folio before him does not come from a desk, only the quill, the book, and the swan. He uses light and shade primarily to define the figure. As the art historian Wilhelm von Bode said early in the 20th century: "It is more than...existences."

This painting is in the Widener Collection. If you would like a reproduction of this painting for $4.00 (to cover postage and handling), please contact the cover of the 1998-99 Aldrich Catalog. It has appeared in Aldrich publications and art

ABOUT THE COVER

The Apostle Paul (oil on canvas 51 $\frac{3}{4}$  x 41 $\frac{1}{8}$ in.) was painted by Rembrandt van Rijn (1606-1669) about 1657. Paul seems to have fascinated Rembrandt throughout his career; the artist represented him as early as 1627 in a painting of Saint Paul in Prison, and as late as 1661, when he painted himself as Saint Paul.

Probably executed with at least some participation by an assistant, this painting is a superb example of Rembrandt's later style. In his earlier works, details were carefully delineated, subjects normally shown in an identifiable environment, and the apparent source of light specifically located. In The Apostle Paul, there is no sense of a particular setting, details are minimized, and the light on Paul's face, hands, and on the folio before him does not come from a readily identifiable source. Aside from the chair and the desk, only the quill, the book, and the sword behind the desk are recognizable. Here Rembrandt does not use light and shade primarily to define form but to express moods and spiritual meaning. As the art historian Wilhelm von Bode said early in this century, Rembrandt's later works rendered "souls rather than...existences."

This painting is in the Widener Collection at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

If you would like a reproduction of this painting, we will be happy to send you a full-color print (11 x 14in.) for $4.00 (to cover postage and handling). Please request Z25,188-7 and specify The Apostle Paul from the cover of the 1998-99 Aldrich Catalog. You can also contact us for a list of paintings that have appeared in Aldrich publications and are available as full-color prints.

PURITY

Purity is an essential criterion for every Aldrich product. All chemicals listed are subjected to acting tests in our Quality Control Laboratory determination of purity. The purity and physical constants stated herein are typical values; they may vary slightly from batch to batch. See the General Information section for additional information.

TERMS

Orders are subject to the terms and conditions stated on the standard Aldrich invoices and packing slips in effect at the time of shipment. Terms and conditions in effect at the time of printing of this Catalog/Handbook are listed at the back of this catalog.

MATERIAL SAFETY DATA SHEETS

MSDS will be provided as required by OSHA's Hazard Communication Standard. MSDSs are computer generated daily from our database. This procedure ensures that the most up-to-date information is provided. MSDSs are sent under separate cover to the attention of the Safety Officer, unless otherwise specified. If an MSDS is needed prior to shipment of a product, or in the event of an emergency, please contact our Technical Services Department at 1-800-231-8327.

SHIPPING

We generally ship our product in accordance with the method specified in your order. We reserve the right to change the method when either regulations require the change or, in our judgement, the item(s) ordered cannot be shipped safely by the method specified.

RETURNS

We have imposed strict procedures on the return of materials to comply with regulatory guidelines and product quality. WE WILL NOT ACCEPT return shipments unless we have given prior permission and shipping instructions.

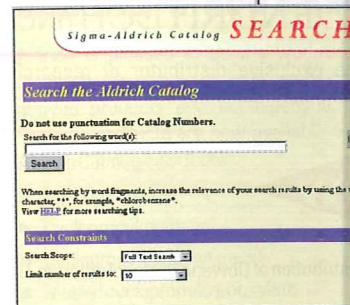

Our goal is to work with you in meeting all regulatory requirements for shipping. Please call our Customer Services Department for additional information.
