Hello Mr Heinisch,

Please find the enclosed text, which I have changed and partially abridged.

I had the feeling that if I adopt the text entirely as sent by you, I would write as an employee of a law firm, which would not be credible for me and which would not be compatible with my work here at the Library. 8-)

Apart from this, I hope that I support the proper side/party 8-) with my letter.

Sorry for both remarks above. I hope that overall, that this is helpful to you.

I see the whole issue already as an exception that we are replying in such great detail, for which perhaps you must thank the summer time. 8-)

BTW: The publication date of a dissertation or other publication is actually already sufficient if only the year is crucial. Even the most important US-American Library-Database has enlisted the book.

(even if no inventories have been evidenced in the States).

I am always available for further queries.

Best regards from Hamburg
Thomas Hapke

The text can, of course, be modified and abridged, if the core information is still included. The same applies to the attachments referred to in the letter. Reference can be made to the E-mail correspondence.
