Providing quick access to certain applications on a computing device is disclosed. A security wall is enforced with respect to applications on the computer, wherein enforcing the security wall includes preventing access to the applications until a security input is received. A predefined input is received through a home button on a touch-sensitive display of the computer. Access is provided to a particular application in response to receiving the predefined input, wherein providing access to the particular application includes allowing a user to access the particular application without receiving the security input from the user.
