A digital watch is provided having a viewing display for displaying images and including an orientation sensing module for sensing angular movement of the watch relative to at least one axis of rotation and a control module for rotating the image displayed on the viewing display to maintain the presentation of an image in a substantially constant upright orientation when directed (angled) toward a primary or secondary viewing person(s). As the user alters the orientation of the watch face, the tilt sensor(s) detects the change in device orientation. These changes in orientation are used to reorient the image being displayed on the viewing display of the watch.
