(57) ABSTRACT

An electronic device with a rotary knob includes a casing, a rotary knob and a switch. Wherein, the casing has an opening, the rotary knob is pivoted on the casing and locates in the opening. In addition, the rotary knob includes a first interconnecting part used for engaging with a second interconnecting part on the switch. As the rotary knob is turned by an external force, the first interconnecting part of the rotary knob would drive the second interconnecting part to move, so that the second interconnecting part shifts from a first position to a second position, which results in switching the switch and activating corresponding function.
