- 9. This Court has supplemental jurisdiction over NantWorks' state law claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1367(a).
- 10. This Court has personal jurisdiction over BoA because it has committed acts in this District that give rise to all acts of infringement and misappropriation asserted herein. This Court also has personal jurisdiction over BoA because it has substantial, systematic and continuous contacts with this District. INTRODUCTION

- 13. This dispute is based on BoA's unauthorized use and misappropriation of NantWorks' pioneering image recognition technology in BoA's widely used mobile check deposit solution.
 - 14. In early 2010, Matt Calman, a BoA executive, witnessed a demonstration

- 15. Pursuant to their agreements, during 2011 and 2012 NantWorks developed mobile check deposit software that vastly outperformed BoA's then existing solution. BoA was intrigued by the performance of NantWorks' mobile check deposit software and led NantWorks to believe that BoA would incorporate NantWorks' mobile check deposit software into the commercial version of BoA's Mobile Banking application and compensate NantWorks for the use of its technology. After delivering a complete version of NantWorks' software and related confidential technical information, however, NantWorks did not receive further updates on the project. NantWorks assumed that BoA decided to pursue its existing technology.
- 16. Several years later, NantWorks uncovered information demonstrating that BoA not only continued to use NantWorks' software without authorization, but that BoA had incorporated NantWorks' proprietary image recognition technology and NantWorks' intellectual property into its mobile check deposit solution. As explained below, BoA's actions give rise to NantWorks' claims for patent infringement, copyright infringement, trade secret misappropriation, and breach of contract.

¹ Formed in 2011, NantWorks (through predecessor companies) acquired a number of image recognition companies, including IPPLEX in August 2010 and Evryx in February 2011. Reference to Nantworks in this Complaint refers to both

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

NantWorks, Evryx, and IPPLEX

- 17. NantWorks was formed in 2011 to, among other things, develop solutions to real-world machine vision and image recognition challenges. NantWorks recognized the benefits of using mobile devices to recognize features in digital images and the application of such technology to numerous industries, including financial services. To expand its depth in this field, NantWorks (through predecessor companies) acquired a number of image recognition companies, including IPPLEX in August 2010 and Evryx in February 2011.
- 18. Evryx had developed and patented fundamental image recognition technology in the early 2000s. Its technology allowed mobile devices to capture images/video, recognize specific features in the images/video, and provide information associated with the recognized features to users. Evryx's technology was years ahead of its time, being developed well before the introduction of the first iPhone in 2007 and other early smartphones. Indeed, Evryx's technology was developed when mobile phones had very limited functionality and certainly nothing approaching the image recognition technologies that are in use today. For example, one of the most successful mobiles phones released in the early 2000s was the Nokia 3310 shown below, which did not include any capability for image recognition technology, let alone an integrated camera²:
