ARGUMENT(S)
The Final Office Action dated September 23, 2016 refuses registration on the grounds of descriptiveness under Section 2(e)(1) of the Trademark Act. Applicant respectfully submits that the applied-for mark is not descriptive. However, rather than providing further argument on this point, Applicant submits, pursuant to TMEP §1212.02(c), that the phrase “BEST OF LIVE TV” has acquired distinctiveness. Therefore, Applicant respectfully requests an amendment to its application to include a claim of acquired distinctiveness under Section 2(f) as stated more fully below. See 15 U.S.C. §1052(f). Applicant, concurrently with this Request for Reconsideration, has also filed a Notice of Appeal. Section 2(f) Claim The wording “BEST OF LIVE TV” has become distinctive of the goods and/or services as evidenced by the attached evidence. See Declaration of Glenn Samuel Eisen, attached as Exhibit 1. The Eisen Declaration, along with the thirty-two (32) Exhibits attached thereto, constitutes a prima facie case that the purchasing public has come to view the proposed mark as an indicator of origin. Briefly summarized, this evidences establishes: <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Applicant advertises the mark on national television, resulting in over one billion (1,000,000,000) household impressions.2. Applicant advertises the mark via alternative media, resulting in distribution of over sixty-eight million (68,000,000) package inserts, magazine inserts, newspaper inserts, and similar pieces.3. Applicant uses the mark in national direct mail advertising, including over five million (5,000,000) direct mail inserts.4. Applicant advertises the mark on a page web viewed by over one million (1,000,000) visitors.5. Websites and publications that cover Applicant’s industry have reported extensively on Applicant’s services using Applicant’s mark. This coverage includes, but is not limited to, coverage in industry publications such as Multichannel News, Cord Cutters News, and Streaming Observer; technology publications such as CNET, PC Magazine, and Engadget; and general interest publications such as the Los Angeles Times, the Denver Post, and NBC News.6. In addition to the foregoing media, Applicant also advertises on Facebook, Instagram, and podcasts.7. Applicant’s advertisements use the mark in a trademark manner, including prominent, set-off text and use of the TM symbol.8. Netflix, Amazon Video (Amazon Prime), and Hulu, which are the three largest OTT service providers, do not use BEST OF LIVE TV on their websites.

The above-summarized evidence, along with the additional evidence included with the Eisen declaration, demonstrates that the mark has acquired distinctiveness indicating the origin of the services. In re Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., 774 F.2d 1116, 1125, 227 USPQ 417, 422 (Fed. Cir. 1985); TMEP 1212.06.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, Applicant respectfully submits that its application be approved for publication, and such action is respectfully requested. In the event that further prosecution is needed and can be accomplished via a telephone conference, the Examining Attorney is encouraged to contact Applicant’s attorney, Mr. Ian L. Saffer, at 303-268-0066.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS SECTION

SECTION 2(f) Claim of Acquired Distinctiveness, BASED ON EVIDENCE	The mark has become distinctive of the goods/services, as demonstrated by the attached evidence.

Request for Reconsideration after Final Action

To the Commissioner for Trademarks:

Application serial no. 86812562 BEST OF LIVE TV(Standard Characters, see <https://tmng-al.uspto.gov/resting2/api/img/86812562/large>) has been amended as follows:

ARGUMENT(S)

In response to the substantive refusal(s), please note the following:

The Final Office Action dated September 23, 2016 refuses registration on the grounds of descriptiveness under Section 2(e)(1) of the Trademark Act. Applicant respectfully submits that the applied-for mark is not descriptive. However, rather than providing further argument on this point, Applicant submits, pursuant to TMEP §1212.02(c), that the phrase “BEST OF LIVE TV” has acquired distinctiveness.

Therefore, Applicant respectfully requests an amendment to its application to include a claim of acquired distinctiveness under Section 2(f) as stated more fully below. See 15 U.S.C. §1052(f). Applicant, concurrently with this Request for Reconsideration, has also filed a Notice of Appeal.

Section 2(f) Claim

The wording “BEST OF LIVE TV” has become distinctive of the goods and/or services as evidenced by the attached evidence. See Declaration of Glenn Samuel Eisen, attached as Exhibit 1. The Eisen Declaration, along with the thirty-two (32) Exhibits attached thereto, constitutes a prima facie case that the purchasing public has come to view the proposed mark as an indicator of origin. Briefly summarized, this evidences establishes:

1. Applicant advertises the mark on national television, resulting in over one billion (1,000,000,000) household impressions.
2. Applicant advertises the mark via alternative media, resulting in distribution of over sixty-eight million (68,000,000) package inserts, magazine inserts, newspaper inserts, and similar pieces.
3. Applicant uses the mark in national direct mail advertising, including over five million (5,000,000) direct mail inserts.
4. Applicant advertises the mark on a page web viewed by over one million (1,000,000) visitors.
5. Websites and publications that cover Applicant’s industry have reported extensively on Applicant’s services using Applicant’s mark. This coverage includes, but is not limited to, coverage in industry publications such as Multichannel News, Cord Cutters News, and Streaming Observer; technology publications such as CNET, PC Magazine, and Engadget; and general interest publications such as the Los Angeles Times, the Denver Post, and NBC News.
6. In addition to the foregoing media, Applicant also advertises on Facebook, Instagram, and podcasts.
7. Applicant’s advertisements use the mark in a trademark manner, including prominent, set-off text and use of the TM symbol.
8. Netflix, Amazon Video (Amazon Prime), and Hulu, which are the three largest OTT service providers, do not use BEST OF LIVE TV on their websites.

The above-summarized evidence, along with the additional evidence included with the Eisen declaration, demonstrates that the mark has acquired distinctiveness indicating the origin of the services. In re Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., 774 F.2d 1116, 1125, 227 USPQ 417, 422 (Fed. Cir. 1985); TMEP 1212.06.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, Applicant respectfully submits that its application be approved for publication, and such action is respectfully requested. In the event that further prosecution is needed and can be accomplished via a telephone conference, the Examining Attorney is encouraged to contact Applicant’s attorney, Mr. Ian L. Saffer, at 303-268-0066.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

SECTION 2(f) Claim of Acquired Distinctiveness, BASED ON EVIDENCE

The mark has become distinctive of the goods/services, as demonstrated by the attached evidence.

In re Application No. 86812562
Mark: BEST OF LIVE TV

Examining Attorney:

DECLARATION OF GLENN SAMUEL
EISEN

Commissioner for Trademarks
P.O. Box 1451
Alexandria, VA 22313-1451

I, Glenn Samuel Eisen, declare that:

1. I am Senior Vice President and Chief Marketing Officer, Sling TV L.L.C. I was previously, for nearly 30 years, involved in leading marketing and business initiatives including the following experiences: Executive Vice President, Marketing for Guthy Renker (maker of Proactiv); Senior Vice President, Marketing for Vonage (Internet telephony service provider); and Senior Vice President, Marketing for AOL. I have worked in the field of over-the-top (“OTT”) Internet video distribution for approximately five years.
2. Sling TV has continuously used the phrase BEST OF LIVE TV as a trademark for OTT services since approximately September 1, 2015.
3. Since September of 2015 when the BEST OF LIVE TV mark was first used, Sling TV has spent a substantial amount of money on advertising showing the BEST OF LIVE TV mark across all of the media that Sling TV advertises in. This advertising is described in greater detail below.
 - a. BEST OF LIVE TV is used in national television advertising. Specifically, the mark has been used in a 60-second advertisement that has resulted in 1.18 billion Household Impressions since August 29, 2016.

- b. Sling TV hosts a website offering services under the BEST OF LIVE TV mark at the domain www.sling.com. See Exhibit A. The site has had over 1.5 million visitors since July 1, 2016. The mark also has been used in an advertisement that appears on YouTube, which has been viewed over 26,000 times. See <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nkfbSTDEDFY>.
- c. The BEST OF LIVE TV mark appears in at least four paid social media advertisements on Facebook and Instagram, and also in advertising in podcasts.
- d. The BEST OF LIVE TV mark is used in national direct mail advertising. Over 5.7 million direct mail inserts using the mark were sent in 2016.
- e. In addition, BEST OF LIVE TV is promoted nationally in alternative media, such as package inserts, statement inserts, magazine inserts, value pack inserts, newspaper inserts, and change of address inserts. In 2016, Sling TV sent over 68.9 million such inserts.
- f. The BEST OF LIVE TV mark has been promoted at the Consumer Electronics Show (CES). CES is the premier consumer technology industry trade show and was attended by over 177,000 people in 2016.
- g. The attached Exhibits B-H are examples of the advertisements referenced in this declaration.

4. The Sling TV subscriber base has been growing steadily since September 2015 and, as a result Sling TV was ranked sixth in the top 10 OTT services in October of 2016 by Parks Associates. See Exhibit I.

5. Websites and publications that cover the OTT industry have reported extensively on Sling TV's BEST OF LIVE TV services. This coverage includes coverage in industry publications such as Multichannel News, Cord Cutters News, and Streaming Observer; technology publications such as CNET, PC Magazine, and Engadget; and general interest publications such as the Los Angeles Times, the Denver Post, and NBC News. See Exhibits J-AB.

6. Sling TV's service received the following industry recognitions and awards shortly before the BEST OF LIVE TV mark was adopted: Tech Radar (Best Home Theater Product), The Verge (The Verge Awards At CES 2015), Engadget (Best of CES), Digital Trends (Top Tech of CES 2015- Best of Show), Mashable (Best of CES 2015), Reviewed.com (2015 CES Editor's Choice), Gottabemobile.com (Most Outstanding at CES 2015), PCMag.com (Best of CES 2015- Best Home Theater Gear), TechnoBuffalo (Best of CES 2015).

7. To the best of my knowledge, the phrase BEST OF LIVE TV does not have an accepted, understood meaning in the relevant industry separate and apart from Sling TV's services. In the industry, the phrase BEST OF LIVE TV is understood to be a trademark designating Sling TV's services.

8. I have reviewed the websites of Sling TV's competitors, Netflix, Amazon Video (Amazon Prime), and Hulu, which are the three largest OTT service providers based on number of subscribers. The phrase BEST OF LIVE TV is not present on these parties' websites. See Exhibits AC-AE.

9. I have conducted a Google search of the term BEST OF LIVE TV. All of the organic results returned on the first page that relate to OTT services refer to Sling TV's services. See Exhibit AF.

I declare under the penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States that the foregoing is true and correct.

Parks Associates Announces 2016 Update to Top 10 U.S. Subscription OTT Video Services

Share This

Majority of OTT video consumption now on Internet-connected TV

Parks Associates today released its updated top 10 list for subscription over-the-top (OTT) video services, based on number of subscribers, with Netflix retaining its top position while services Sling TV, Showtime, and CBS moved up or entered the list over the past year.

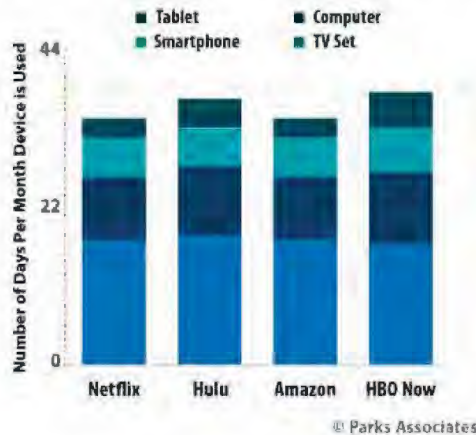

Parks Associates' list of top 10 OTT video services, ranked by number of paid subscribers, excluding transactional or ad-based services, is based upon reported figures and estimates from Parks Associates' OTT Video Market Tracker using multiple consumer surveys, network traffic data, and reported OTT video service provider information. The top 10 list of subscription OTT video services for the U.S. market at the end of the third quarter of 2016 is as follows:

1. Netflix
2. Amazon Video (Amazon Prime)
3. Hulu
4. MLB.TV
5. WWE Network
6. Sling TV
7. HBO Now
8. Crunchyroll
9. Showtime
10. CBS All Access

"Importantly, all of these services have increased their subscriber base over the past year. The top five OTT services have stayed consistent, primarily through maintaining or growing the massive user and subscriber bases that they have built over the past several years," said Brett Sappington, Senior Director of Research, Parks Associates. "Showtime and CBS All Access have made a significant push into the OTT space. Their recognized brands and popular content, including Showtime's Homeland and Ray Donovan, have provided them with a good basis for building an OTT service. Sling TV has continued to evolve its offering, testing new options and adding several new channels in order to grow its customer base."

Frequency of Device Use for Internet Video by OTT Video Service Subscribers

Subscribers of Specified Service in U.S. Broadband Households

Sappington noted that MLB and WWE continue to lead in sports-related OTT video services. "In addition to MLB.TV's organic growth, T-Mobile subscribers received a free subscription to MLB.TV at the beginning of the baseball season," Sappington said. "The WWE Network has continued its growth. In its 2Q 2016 financials, WWE reported that it had 1.5 million paying subscribers for its WWE Network, up from 1.2 million a year earlier."

OTT video service providers, which captured over 200 Emmy nominations and over 40 wins this year, have prompted "the return of the living room" in the connected home through their association with quality original programming. In 2014, the computer outranked the TV in use among OTT subscribers, but now the TV is the dominant OTT screen.

"We are clearly seeing OTT video moving to the television," Sappington said. "OTT users watch OTT services on their TV screens between 17-20 days per month, much more than platforms such as a PC, smartphone, or tablet."

Early 2016 research from Parks Associates' OTT Video Market Tracker and digital media research shows:

- 63% of U.S. broadband households subscribe to an OTT video service as of the third quarter of 2016, up from 57% at the beginning of 2015.
- Overall OTT video service adoption is approximately 15% higher among Latino and Hispanic U.S. broadband households when compared to all U.S. broadband households. One-half of Latino or Hispanic U.S. broadband households are service stackers and subscribe to two or more paid OTT video services. Latino or Hispanic American broadband households also have the highest adoption of sports services (29%) and Netflix (64%) when compared to the national average.
- Most major OTT video services receive a positive NPS (Net Promoter Score). For example, Netflix's NPS in 1Q 2016 was 38. By comparison, the overall NPS for U.S. pay TV among its customers is -38.

Sling TV Tests Fox-Anchored Multi-Stream Service

$20 package features Fox, Fox Sports, FX, others

Sling TV, Dish Network's OTT-TV service for cord-cutters, said it has booted up a beta on a new multi-stream service that will be anchored by channels from the Fox Networks stable, including the Fox broadcast network (in owned-and-operated station markets), along with networks such as AMC and A&E for $20 per month.

But the new package – which includes 30 channels including Fox broadcasting channels in select markets and regional sports network YES Network (currently off Comcast in a contract dispute, meaning Comcast customers in the New York City market are missing New York Yankees Major League Baseball games) – won't include ESPN, which in the past was one of the selling points of the original Sling TV service. Sling TV customers can still watch ESPN as part of its original $20 monthly package, but won't get the Fox networks.

UPDATE: Disney and ESPN Networks said in a statement that “we are in active discussions with Dish about their multi-stream Sling TV service but we have yet to reach an agreement. Our brands and content are best-in-class and would add unparalleled value to this new service.”

The addition of Fox broadcasting channels also is a milestone for the service. When Sling TV launched in 2014, it did so without any broadcasters in the lineup, a sticking point for the OTT service. In the beta service, customers in 17 Fox markets – Atlanta; Austin Texas; Charlotte N.C.; Chicago; Dallas-Fort Worth, Texas; Detroit; Gainesville, Fla.; Houston Texas; Los Angeles; Minneapolis; New York; Orlando, Fla.; Philadelphia; Phoenix; San Francisco; Tampa, Fla., and Washington D.C. – will get access to local Fox broadcasting stations. Outside those markets, customers will be able to access on-demand broadcast content.

“Since launch, our customers have asked for more channels and multiple streams. We believe our new multi-stream service, anchored by a strong lineup of Fox content, including top franchises like Empire and The Americans on Fox and FX, as well as access to Major League Baseball in 15 markets, including the New York Yankees, is the first step in answering their requests,” said SlingTV CEO Roger Lynch in a statement. “We look forward to incorporating our customers’ feedback throughout the beta phase as we evolve the multi-stream service to include additional channels, features and functionality.”

The new “Best of Live TV” multi-stream service includes content from Fox Broadcasting, Fox Sports, FX, National Geographic and other popular networks from AMC, A&E, Turner, Scripps and Univision. Customers can add genre packages like Kids, Sports, Lifestyle and HBO and Cinemax for an additional fee.

“We’re proud to partner with Dish and Sling TV to offer our brands Fox Broadcasting, FX, National Geographic and FOX Sports as part of Sling TV’s multi-stream service,” Fox Networks Group president and chief operating officer Randy Freer said in a statement. “This flexible platform, which allows viewers to access our industry-leading programming, ranging from Empire to American Crime Story, the World Series, the Super Bowl and our massively popular local sports, at home or on the go, reflects our commitment to providing the consumer with a better and more seamless TV experience.”

Mike Farrell contributed to this story.

Fox News Channel is not included. Wonder why? This is good for sports fans that like baseball and basketball but it includes CNN instead of the Fox owned news channel? Sling TV still lack Comcast/NBC Universal content.

THE GOOD / Sling TV is the first true Internet-delivered alternative to traditional cable and satellite TV, providing live channels from ESPN, AMC, TNT, CNN and Disney, as well as some on-demand content, for far less than standard pay TV packages, with no contract or commitment. It works anywhere in the US with a stable broadband Internet connection, and video quality is mostly indistinguishable from cable TV. Sling is available on a wide range of devices including Roku, Amazon Fire TV, Android, iOS, and Mac and PC computers.

THE BAD / Sling TV has far fewer channels than basic cable, and many of the $5 per month add-on packs don't add much. You can only watch on one device at the same time. Most channels don't allow you to pause, rewind or fast-forward. On-demand options and authenticated channel apps (like Watch ESPN) are limited, too.

THE BOTTOM LINE / Sling TV's bargain price and freedom from contracts make it well worth a test-drive for prospective cord-cutters or "cord-nevers" who can live with its stripped-down selection of live TV channels.

Fall 2016 update

Sling TV remains the cheapest way to stream numerous live TV channels without getting tied into a long-term contract. And it's the easiest way to cut your cable or satellite TV service and still access a bunch of channels, plus video on demand, at home and on a mobile devices like an iPhone. But it's no longer the only game in town.

Introduced in January 2015, Sling TV delivers livestreams of 20-odd TV channels (in the US only), including ESPN, TBS, CNN, AMC and more in its base package -- called Sling Orange -- which costs $20 per month and is available only on a single device at any given time.

But you don't get the kitchen sink: The base package is missing local broadcast channels (CBS, Fox, NBC, etc.), as well as most popular regional sports networks. For many of those, you can get an alternate bundle -- Sling Blue -- for $25 per month. The "Blue" channels can be streamed to up to three simultaneous devices, too. Want all the channels Sling offers in its base packages? That costs $40 per month, and keeps the single-device restriction on the "Orange" channels. Additional channel tiers can be added for $5 to $10 more per month...at which point, you're back to paying a pretty hefty "cable" bill again.

In March 2016, Sony entered the market with the PlayStation Vue. That service offers more channels and features than Sling, as well as a full-function "cloud DVR," the ability to stream to multiple devices on the same account, and profiles for different family members. Since then, Sony and Sling have been fiddling with their pricing, tweaking their channel lineups and beefing up their respective offerings. And, in June, Sling TV finally came to Apple TV -- though only the new model that launched in 2015, not the older model from 2012 that has since been discontinued.

For now, Sling TV costs the same regardless of where you live; Vue's pricing is $10 more in "select cities," where you also get live local broadcasts of ABC, CBS, Fox and NBC. In other cities, Vue offers shows from those networks on demand with a 24-hour delay, with CBS' on-demand service "coming soon." (Note that CNET is owned by CBS.)

Price aside, Sling's biggest advantage is that it works on pretty much any device; it even works with PC and Mac computers, and there are no restrictions for mobile devices. Vue's device support is much more limited, and it suffers a bunch of restrictions on mobile use too; the DVR is inactive, for example, and certain channels aren't available. You do not need a PlayStation to use Vue, however.

Still, PlayStation Vue has the edge on Sling in a few critical categories: It has a superior interface, DVR capabilities and simultaneous viewing on multiple devices. That noted, Sling offers lower, more flexible pricing options and supports playback on more devices, including iPhones.

The landscape will be further shaken up in the weeks and months ahead. AT&T is launching DirecTV Now, an on-demand video service that's said to deliver up to 100 channels for as little as $35 per month. And Hulu and YouTube are said to be offering their own "over the top" video services in 2017.

Bottom line: The benefits and drawbacks of each service vary widely by region and device, and depend on what type of programming you want. But since none of these services have long-term contracts, you can freely jump from one to the other on the fly -- so there's no real penalty in experimenting.

Editors' note: The original review of Sling TV, first published in January 2015 and updated in March 2015, follows.

Groundbreaking. Unprecedented. Unbundling unbridled.

It's tough to overstate the importance of Sling TV, the first Internet-only service to allow you to watch live ESPN, AMC, CNN, TNT and a handful of other live pay TV channels, for just $20 per month. Just as important is that you don't need to sign any contract, so you can cancel anytime with no penalties.

But is Sling TV actually worth subscribing to right now? It can only be viewed on one screen at a time, most channels won't let you pause for a restroom or snack break, and its selection of channels is just narrow enough that everyone will be missing at least a couple of favorites (fans of BBC America, USA Network and CNBC -- to name just a few -- need not apply). And, of course, Sling TV requires a robust Internet connection -- hopefully one without a data cap -- typically $40-$60 per month by itself, unbundled.

As long as your desire for the included channels outweighs your aversion to those caveats and omissions, Sling TV is pretty awesome. When combined with another programming source or three, like an over-the-air antenna (with or without a DVR) for local network channels, Netflix ($9 per month), Hulu Plus ($8 per month) and/or Amazon Prime ($99 per year or $8.25 per month), it may -- just may -- make you feel like you never needed cable in the first place. Unless you're a fan of sports beyond ESPN, or HBO (for now), or Fox News -- again, to name just a few.

In the end, despite its "first!" status, bundle-busting airs and the marketing to appeal to Millennials who can't or don't want to pay for traditional cable TV, Sling TV is just another option that makes it easier to quit cable. Depending on your viewing preferences, it might be the most powerful such option to date.

We're excited to see how it grows. Now that Sony's PlayStation Vue has launched Sling TV has some competition, which will only intensify when Apple enters the game later this year. For now, however, Sling TV is the only game in town with ESPN. And for just $20 and no obligation, it's definitely worth testing yourself.

Update, March 19, 2015: The text of this review has been updated to reflect the latest updates to the Sling TV service, including the addition of A&E Networks and an app for the Xbox One. We expect to update this review once we perform hands-on testing with the Xbox One and get a chance to test PlayStation Vue. In the meantime, check out PlayStation Vue vs. Sling TV for our latest thoughts.

Editors' note: The Sling TV service reviewed here is separate and distinct from the Sling TV hardware product, which was originally released under the name Slingbox 500.

Sarah Tew/CNET

The basics: Packages, channels and devices

The base $20 per month package includes 16 channels of live TV, most of them basic cable staples including ESPN, AMC, Disney Channel, TBS, TNT, History and HGTV.

You can also get add-on packs for $5 per month.

SLING TV PACKAGES

Package	Price	Channels
The Best of Live TV (core)	$20 per month	ESPN, ESPN2, AMC, TNT, TBS, CNN, A&E, Lifetime, History, Food Network, HGTV, Travel Channel, Cartoon Network/Adult Swim, Disney Channel, ABC Family, IFC, H2, El Rey Network, Maker, Galavision
Sports Extra	+$5 per month	SEC Network, ESPNNews, ESPNU, Universal Sports, Univision Deportes, beIN Sports, ESPN Buzzer Beater, ESPN Bases Loaded, ESPN Goal Line
Kids Extra	+$5 per month	Disney Junior, Disney XD, Boomerang, Baby TV, Duck TV
Lifestyle Extra	+$5 per	truTV, Cooking Channel, DIY, WE tv, FYI, LMN

World News Extra	+$5 per month	Bloomberg TV, HLN, Euro News, France 24, NDTV 24/7, News 18, Russia Today
Hollywood Extra	+$5 per month	EPIX, EPIX2, EPIX3, EPIX Drive-In, Sundance TV

All of the above channels are available now aside from A&E, History, Lifetime and H2, which are all coming before the end of March 2015, and FYI and LMN, which are "coming soon."

Sling bills Cartoon Network and Adult Swim as two separate "Nielsen-rated" networks, but just like your cable company, presents them on a single channel split between day and evening. In the same vein, ESPN Buzzer Beater, ESPN Bases Loaded and ESPN Goal Line from the Sports Extra add-on package are basically a single channel that airs only during the respective college basketball, baseball and football seasons with highlights and cut-ins.

Major broadcast networks, namely CBS, ABC, Fox and NBC, not to mention PBS, are not included on Sling TV

New channels added to the base package since launch include A&E, History, Lifetime, AMC, Spanish-language Galavision, Robert Rodriguez' El Rey Network, with grindhouse-style movies and TV shows, and a channel called Maker, with myriad short-form video from Disney-owned Maker Studios. The latter feels a lot like an endless YouTube playlist set to shuffle. Sling says Polaris+, a gaming-related channel featuring long-form original programming (check out Maker's Polaris YouTube channel for a taste) is coming soon exclusively to Sling TV.

You'll notice that major broadcast networks, namely CBS, ABC, Fox and NBC, not to mention PBS, are not included on Sling TV. (And let us note, for the record, that CNET is published by CBS Interactive, a division of CBS.) Numerous other cable channels, such as regional sports channels, Bravo, Fox News and Comedy Central, and premium channels, such as HBO, Showtime and The Movie Channel, are also absent.

To watch Sling TV you'll need to subscribe at Sling.com and set up an account, then install the app on a supported device. Sling TV is available on the devices listed in the table below.

SLING TV DEVICES

TV devices	Roku (TVs, boxes and streaming stick), Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, Xbox One
Mobile devices	Android phones and tablets. iOS phones and tablets (iPhone, iPad, iPod Touch), PC and Mac computers
"Coming soon"	Chromecast, Google Nexus Player, Android TV devices (select 2015 Sony and Sharp Smart TVs), Samsung & LG Smart TVs
Not available	PlayStation (3 or 4)

There is no native Sling app for Apple TV, and the compatibility on that product with AirPlay from an iOS device is currently murky (see below for hands-on testing).

Once you have the device and app installed, you'll be able to sign in and start watching anywhere in the US that has stable Internet connection, whether wired, Wi-Fi or cellular data. Sling didn't give us any minimum requirement, saying only that, "The same Internet speed is required to watch Sling TV that is needed to watch similar content on platforms like Netflix and Hulu."

For more details, check out Sling TV: Everything you need to know.

Just like regular TV, complete with commercials

Streaming live Sling TV over the Internet to a Roku 3 box connected to a TV feels a lot like watching TV via a cable box.

The picture quality was generally very good, video ran smoothly and in my three days of testing I only experienced a couple major chokes and dropouts I could blame on the app(s) or service. I was using Wi-Fi exclusively, with good routers and Internet connections at home and in the CNET lab. Of course a suboptimal connection might mar your experience.

The largely unskippable ads, another similarity between Sling and standard TV, might do the same. We're not talking Hulu-style short-term ads here, either. Sling TV is burdened with the same length of advertising breaks as regular TV, with the same national ads. For what it's worth, Sling's rep told me, "Sling TV will feature Dynamic Ad Insertion, allowing for targeted advertising that creates a better experience for the viewer as well as advertisers and programmers," but like many "features," it's not yet live. Yay?

It's also worth noting that, like their premium counterparts on regular cable, the Epix movie channels from the Hollywood Extra add-on pack are all commercial-free.

I also noticed couple of differences between Sling TV and cable right off the bat. Changing a channel causes a "loading" or "buffering" delay of 1 to 5 seconds -- or longer, if your connection is slow -- as the new channel cues up. Pausing and rewinding, which DVR users and streamers take for granted, is largely off-limits (see below). And of course there simply aren't as many channels.

In addition, all of the channels showed a delay of 1 to 2 minutes between Sling TV and my reference Verizon Fios TV service. The ESPNs were about 1 minute behind, while CNN, TBS and Bloomberg TV were closer to 2 minutes behind. If you love following along with a show in real-time on Twitter, relish your news to be as "live" as possible, or dread the giveaway cheer from a neighbor's house as the local team makes a big play, the delay might be an issue.

When I asked about it, Sling's reply was encouraging and unusually expansive. "Since Sling TV is a new service, we have chosen to be conservative in our signal delay to allow for congestion or other potential Internet propagation delays that can occur over the various networks between the head-end signals and the viewer. We will adjust the settings so all channels have the same perceived time settings, and we expect the perceived delay will be significantly reduced over time. We do this to optimize picture quality only; there is no cost savings on our end." Fair enough.

Sarah Tew/CNET

Not your average program guide

All of the apps I tested -- Roku (on a Roku 3, Roku Streaming Stick and a TCL Roku TV), iOS (on a pair of iPad 2 s), Android (on a Galaxy Note 2 phone), PC (multiple computers) and Mac (on the entry-level 2014 Mac Mini) -- had similar feel and mostly common menu arrangement. The majority of my testing was on a Roku 3.

The Roku app is the best and most refined, which makes sense since Sling TV believes most users will watch on a TV as opposed to a mobile device. Its menus were simple, stable and quick to respond, but not perfect. Hitting the asterisk key on the Roku remote calls up the main menu, a strip overlapping the bottom of the picture with options (see picture below), including a toggle for closed captions, which worked well, just as expected.

Sarah Tew/CNET

Hitting the replay button allows you to flip back and forth between two channels. You can also flip channels up and down using the remote's cursor keys. Since there's an information bar with the current show and an intentional delay before actually going to the new channel, this method also allows you an alternate way to browse. The delay also means inveterate flippers won't be as satisfied as with a standard cable box, however. Most users will employ the "TV" option to select channels and shows.

Instead of the standard program guide grid, the channels appear in a horizontal ribbon of logos along the middle of the screen, with nine visible at once. The look is nicer than a grid but less practical; I found scrolling among channels a pain to reach the one I wanted, and wished I could rearrange them. You can filter channels by genre, with another couple button presses.

The selected channel corresponds to a second horizontal ribbon of labeled thumbnails that displays the current show playing on that channel, as well as a few shows in the future. On certain channels that allow "3 Day Replay" (see below) you can also see shows that aired in the past. Again, the strip isn't as functional as a grid -- which easily reveals what's on now across multiple channels -- but it looks nicer, at least when the thumbnails aren't all the same (they often are).

Selecting a future show simply calls up an information tile; there's no reminder and certainly no option to schedule it to "record." Unlike your cable company or the late Aereo service, Sling TV doesn't have full DVR functionality. The 3 Day Replay feature, however, is Sling's version of limited on-demand TV.

Sarah Tew/CNET

No pause, rewind or commercial skip on most channels

Here's where Sling TV feels too restrictive. On most channels pressing pause, rewind or fast-forward on the remote doesn't work at all. You just get a message that says, "This action is not available on ESPN" (or whatever channel you're on). On the PC and mobile apps, those controls are grayed out and the scrub bar is inactive. In essence, the channels are live-only.

SLING TV CHANNELS THAT DISABLE FAST-FORWARD AND REWIND

Core channels	ESPN, ESPN2, AMC, TNT, TBS, Cartoon Network/Adult Swim, The Disney Channel, ABC Family, CNN, IFC
Add-on channels	SEC Network, ESPNEWS, ESPNU, ESPN Buzzer Beater, ESPN Bases Loaded, ESPN Goal Line, Disney Junior, Disney XD, Boomerang, HLN, Sundance TV, truTV, WE tv

Sling hasn't said as much, but I'm guessing that part of those networks' agreements to appear on the service stipulates no pausing or rewinding, which of course makes it impossible to create a "buffer" allowing you to skip commercials -- a standard tactic familiar to any DVR owner.

A less restrictive alternative would have been to allow a short "bathroom break buffer," say, 5 minutes or so. But for now, when watching "Monday Night Football," you'll just have to hold it until the next commercial break. (Don't worry, another one is coming up soon enough.)

Sling TV's FAQ originally claimed that on some Turner networks (TNT, Cartoon Network and TBS) "you can rewind a show up to the point when you first started watching it" but that's no longer the case. The company told me, "This was outdated language that we have since removed from our FAQ website. At this time, all Turner channels are live-only." Interestingly, that statement leaves open the (slim) possibility that some channels might regain pause and rewind functionality, perhaps for an additional fee.

Sarah Tew/CNET

Other channels allow limited DVR and VOD functions

On the remainder of the channels the pause, rewind and fast-forward buttons worked as expected. I could pause a current show and rewind all the way to the beginning. I could also fast-forward, even through commercials, to catch back up to live time.

SLING TV CHANNELS THAT ALLOW PAUSE, REWIND AND 3- OR 7-DAY REPLAY

Core channels	Food Network, HGTV, Travel Channel, El Rey Network, Maker, Galavisión
Add-on channels	Universal Sports, Univision Deportes, beIN Sports, EPIX, EPIX2, EPIX3, EPIX Drive-In, Cooking Channel, DIY, Bloomberg TV, Baby TV, Duck TV, Euro News, France 24, NDTV 24/7, News 18, Russia Today

Those channels also allow you to watch any show aired within the past three days, an extra Sling TV calls "3-Day Replay."

For a few, namely the Epix movie channels, Universal Sports, beIN Sports, Bloomberg TV, Baby TV, Duck TV, and most of the world news channels, you can actually access shows and movies from as far back as a week. The other exception from the chart above is Maker, which only goes back a day (probably because its "shows" are so short and numerous).

Sling TV comes to Xbox One, adds History, Lifetime, and more March Madness

The pioneering Internet TV service added the Xbox One to its list of compatible hardware and upgraded the base $20 channel lineup with A&E, History, H2 and Lifetime, bringing the total to 20 channels. It also added a truTV option to bolster March Madness availability with TBS and TNT.

Internet TV services by Apple and Sony may be coming later and soon, respectively, but Sling TV is here today, and it's growing fast.

As promised at launch, the service is now available on the Xbox One, making it the first game console with a Sling TV app and the third big-screen platform, after Amazon Fire TV and Roku. Sling TV is also available on iOS and Android devices, as well as Mac and Windows computers.

Sling also once again expanded the selection of channels in its "Best of Live TV" core package, which costs $20 per month. A&E, History, H2 and Lifetime are now included in the price. They'll be live by the end of March.

CLOSE

7 design 6 ecosystem

Sling is also rejiggering two of its $5/month add-on packs, renaming them and shuffling the channel lineups.

More March Madness with truTV

To coincide with the first games of the NCAA Tournament, known as March Madness, Sling also added Turner channel truTV to its $5/month Lifestyle Extra pack. The channel will carry numerous games, starting today.

TNT and TBS, which are available in Sling's base package, will also air a wide selection of games starting Thursday, March 19. In total the three Turner networks will air 49 tourney games and cover the first three rounds, as well as select regional finals and the two Final Four games on April 4.

CBS, which is not available on Sling TV, will carry the remaining 22 games including the national title game on April 6. For the record, CNET is published by CBS Interactive, a division of CBS.

Xbox One: Promotions and Kinect

As usual with a Sling TV hardware launch, the companies are offering incentives to get users signed-up. According to the press release:

"Current Xbox Live members who have an Xbox One will receive one month of Sling TV free, after downloading the Sling TV app from the Xbox One Apps Store. Additionally, the first five thousand customers who purchase an Xbox One in a Microsoft retail store or at MicrosoftStore.com between March 17, 2015 and March 22, 2015 will receive three free months of Sling TV service."

Sling's press release also mentions that the Xbox One app allows for gesture-based control for users of the Kinect, and integration with other Xbox One features like Xbox One's Snap multitasking feature.

Here's the current list of Sling TV-compatible hardware:

Sling TV devices

TV devices	Roku (TVs, boxes and streaming stick), Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, Xbox One
Mobile devices	Android phones and tablets, iOS phones and tablets (iPhone, iPad, iPod Touch), PC and Mac computers
Coming soon	Chromecast, Google Nexus Player, Android TV devices (select 2015 Sony and Sharp Smart TVs), Samsung & LG Smart TVs
Not available	PlayStation (3 or 4)

While Xbox One compatibility was mentioned by Sling at launch, the service has not announced any plans to come to Xbox 360 consoles. Given the imminent launch of Sony's competing PlayStation Vue service, we don't expect a Sling TV app for PlayStation consoles anytime soon.

We'll have an updated hands-on with Xbox One as part of the main Sling TV review soon.

New channels and lineup details

With the addition of A&E, History, H2 and Lifetime, the base $20 per month package now stands at 20 total channels.

Meanwhile the underwhelming "News & Info Extra" $5 per month add-on pack has been cancelled after a run of just six weeks and its channels redistributed and augmented.

Effective immediately, you can add the Lifestyle Extra pack and/or World News Extra pack to your subscription for $5 per month (legacy "News & Info Extra" subscribers get grandfathered in and receive both packages for $5). Each features channels both new and old (to Sling), including WE

Robotic legs give the paralyzed a new view of their world

From CNET Magazine: Exoskeletons are slowly making their way out of hospitals and rehab centers and into homes.

Tech Culture

@lesatnews

Arthur Renowitzky can't help but command attention as he walks down the street on a sunny autumn morning.

A driver lowers her window to flash a smile and a thumbs-up. "You got this," she says. A neighbor waves from his front yard. "Go get 'em A.R."

Renowitzky has been paralyzed since 2007 after being shot in the chest for $20 and a fake gold chain. But he can stand and walk, using crutches for balance, when wearing an exoskeleton suit with motorized hips and knees powering his movements.

Wearable robots aren't new. DARPA has been funding their development since the early 2000s with the aim of building motorized armor to enhance soldiers' strength and endurance. Panasonic, Ekso Bionics and others offer upper-body suits that help construction and factory workers lift heavy loads. But their most powerful promise may be in helping people regain control of their bodies.

Therapeutic exoskeletons are found mainly in hospitals and rehab centers, where they help increase strength, fight muscle atrophy and encourage blood circulation. The current generation, from companies like ReWalk, Ekso Bionics, Rex Bionics and SuitX, can be bulky, with a gait best described as robotic. Users can walk with them only on solid, level surfaces and need crutches for balance and support. Still, they're life-changing for paraplegics like Renowitzky.

"It brought tears to my eyes to be eye level with the world again and know that technology is advancing so rapidly," says Renowitzky, 29, describing the first time he stepped into the 50-pound (23 kilogram) ReWalk.

Get up, stand up

Nearly 6,000 miles away, Mark Daniel walks along the shore of the Limmat River that runs through Zurich's Old Town.

The day before, Daniel, 27, had competed against six others in a powered exoskeleton race, where robot-assisted athletes performed six everyday tasks, like climbing stairs and sitting down. He placed second.

Daniel has been testing motorized legs at Florida's not-for-profit Institute for Human and Machine Cognition (IHMC) since 2010, but this was the first time he got to sightsee in them.

"To be walking down the sidewalk outside was a real heartfelt moment for me," he says. "I just stood there at the river for I don't know how long and absorbed it."

So far, only a handful of companies around the world have regulatory approval to sell exoskeletons for home use. Renowitzky is one of the lucky few to have an exosuit to call his own.

Yet about 17,000 people a year suffer from spinal cord injuries in the US alone, according to the National Spinal Cord Injury Statistical Center. For them, rehab is critical. A key part of that is getting them out of bed and moving as soon as possible, says Tom Looby, CEO of Ekso Bionics, citing the Kessler Foundation, a nonprofit focused on rehabilitation research. It found that exosuits helped to improve patients' oxygen consumption, ventilation and heart rates. Patients could also walk faster and farther.

"Why do steps matter? Repetition," says Looby. "If you can discharge people with a higher degree of capability, the thought is you can reduce complications, reduce the lifetime care costs and make people healthier, longer."

Those complications can be both painful and costly. Patients with spinal cord injuries frequently experience cardiovascular disease, bone density loss, urinary tract infections, chronic pain and pressure ulcers, which can require hospitalization and even surgery.

Moving forward

Universities, clinics and tech companies are working to make motorized hips and legs lighter and thin enough to tuck under clothing. Their ultimate goal: to develop suits that feel like second nature to walk in, allowing users to move more quickly and over rougher terrain, turn and sidestep, says Peter Neuhaus, senior researcher at IHMC.

Right now, for example, users have to consciously balance themselves when they take a step. The IHMC wants robotics to take over more of that responsibility.

Why do steps matter? Repetition.

Tom Looby, Ekso Bionics

Neuhaus and his team have built an exoskeleton with powered ankles that can be adjusted for stiffness and angle. These might someday allow users to walk faster and stand without crutches.

And researchers around the world have been working on ways to control exoskeletons by thought alone. We saw one example three years ago, when Juliano Pinto used a mind-controlled suit to kick off the World Cup in Brazil.

Beyond the obvious advantage, such systems could keep the motor-controlling segments of the brain active and elastic, potentially helping patients move more on their own, says Jose Contreras-Vidal, director of the University of Houston's Laboratory for Noninvasive Brain-Machine Interface Systems. "If we're talking about recovery of function, you'll want to act on those brain areas that are involved in walking."

How much?

In the US, the ReWalk and Parker Hannifin Indego are the only exoskeletons people can buy for personal use. They both cost $80,000 (about £64,000, AU$104,200).

Renowitzky got his ReWalk two years ago after a stranger named Eugene Yoon heard his story and decided to hike the 2,650-mile long Pacific Crest Trail to help raise money in a crowdfunding campaign.

Renowitzky sometimes wears the exosuit when speaking for the Life Goes On Foundation, which he founded in 2008 to help victims of spinal cord injuries and gun violence. He also brings it to his childhood playground, where he walks around a track and takes in views of the nearby San Francisco Bay.

People who see him there often ask about his robotic legs.

"I don't mind sharing that with strangers," he says. "It's part of my life."

so much so, he calls his exoskeleton "my buddy," and walking in it still gives him a high.

"It's an amazing feeling that will keep going throughout my day -- even as long as a week," Renowitzky says as he presses a button on his wrist-worn controller to switch the battery-powered ReWalk to seated mode, then uses upper-body strength to slide back into his wheelchair.

"Mentally, it's huge."

Sling TV's new plan lets you stream to 3 devices at the same time

Brittany A. Roston - Apr 13, 2016

Facebook

Twitter

Google

Reddit

Sling TV, the Internet-based live television service, has introduced a new multi-stream plan that allows subscribers to stream to up to three devices simultaneously. The new plan is very similar to the single-streaming plan, but has a limited set of restrictions on certain channels, such as ESPN and ESPN 2, the kids' extras like Disney XD and Boomerang, a bunch of Spanish-language channels, and more.

Sling TV is an Internet-only service from Dish Network that ditches satellite and cable in favor of over-Internet video streaming; it works mostly the same way as an ordinary cable service, but with the advantage of streaming on a wider variety of devices — your smartphone and tablets, for example, in addition to your set-top-box.

The biggest limitation for Sling TV has been the single-streaming restriction, which only lets you stream the service on one device at a time. That changes with the new multi-stream service, which supports up to three devices at once. This means, for example, you could watch the service at home while your child watches it with their phone while at a friend's house.

The new multi-stream service costs $20/month and provides both on-demand and live content from Fox Networks Group, as well as some other base content and any additional packages that are added. This service is currently in beta, and can be subscribed to without having the single-stream plan.

For this plan, the "Best of Live TV" includes FOX Sports and Broadcasting channels, FX, National Geographic, A&E, AMC channels, Univision channels, Turner networks, and Scripps. 'Extras' include Cinemax, HBO, Lifestyle, Hollywood, and World News.

See the full list of channel comparisons here [PDF].

Extra packages, as with the single-stream plan, cost extra and must be selected additionally, the idea being that you can tailor your channel options to your particular tastes, not having to pay for a bunch of channels you're not interested in. While it's not quite as tailored as picking each channel individually, it's much better than the selections you get from most satellite and cable providers.

Fox Networks Groups' President Randy Freer praised the service, saying:

We're proud to partner with Dish and Sling TV to offer our brands FOX Broadcasting, FX, National Geographic and FOX Sports as part of Sling TV's multi-stream service. This flexible platform, which allows viewers to access our industry-leading programming, ranging from 'Empire' to 'American Crime Story,' the World Series, the Super Bowl and our massively popular local sports, at home or on the go, reflects our commitment to providing the consumer with a better and more seamless TV experience.

Sling TV review: Do cord cutters and “cord nevers” even want live TV?

For $20 a month, Dish needs to convince customers that the live TV experience is great

MORGAN HEISS - JAN 25, 2015 11:41 AM UTC

Enlarge

When Dish announced its new Sling TV service at CES this year, the news was received as one of the biggest announcements of the entire show. For $20 per month, Dish said it would offer a standalone app—no cable TV subscription necessary—with access to 12 channels including ESPN, a network notorious for its protection of its content.

The move seemed to be a shot at the loss of cable TV, which has been struggling against the growing number of adult Millennials who have decided they don't need a cable TV subscription. The argument is simple: it's too expensive and forces its customers to pay for channels they don't even want just to get the ones that they do. Cord cutters have instead been content to watch Netflix and Hulu, go to local sports bars if they need to catch an important game, and (worst of all to the cable companies) rent the TV shows they want to see.

FURTHER READING
Dish's 'Sling TV' cuts to cord cutters with ESPN, CBS, ABC, Sci-Fi, and more

HBO knows this move intimately than any company. Access to the channel's shows can only be had by people with not only a cable TV subscription but also an additional HBO subscription. As such, these shows are favorites among streamers. But even this company recently announced that it would be offering a standalone streaming service—a gain targeted toward cord cutters and Millennials—that would not require a cable company subscription.

So Sling TV is the first service to the battlefield of bringing small packages of live TV to an Internet streaming platform, marketing the offering at a low cost per month to appeal to people who canceled their cable TV subscriptions or who never had cable TV subscriptions in the first place. Dish offered. As an early look at Sling TV, and while the interface is well designed and mostly intuitive, we wonder whether the content offered through Sling TV will really be enough of a sell. Is this just a repackaging of the same stuff that cord cutters wanted to get away from in the first place?

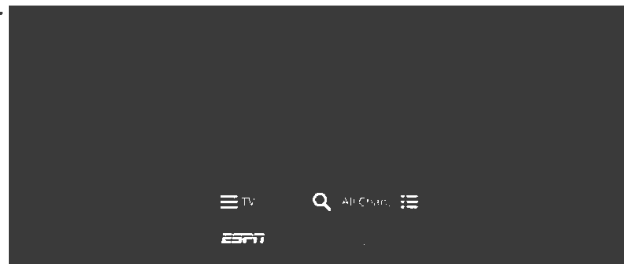

The pitch

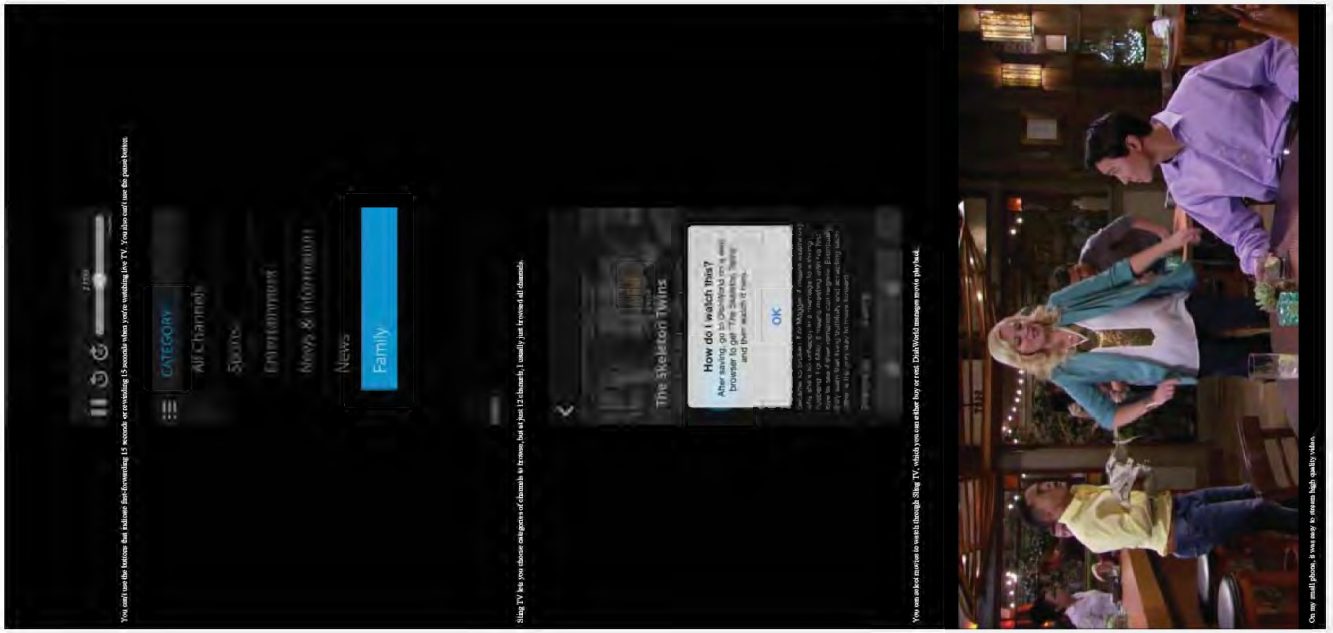

In a lot of ways, I'm in the best position to review a Sling TV subscription. My husband and I are 11 years apart—he's Gen X and I'm a Millennial. While I've never paid for a cable TV subscription in my life, I live with one because my husband has paid for cable TV for a long time. Still, our cable TV subscription is a vestigial organ that's only draining resources at this point. Almost every single time we sit down in front of the TV, we're watching Netflix from the PS4. My husband justifies cable as a necessary expense to be able to watch football in the fall, but during the season we tend to be busy, so we end up at a sports bar anyway, so he goes to a friend's house to watch the game.

I could probably count on my hands the number of times I've picked up the remote to watch live TV over the last 10 years.

So I'm the ideal demographic for a Sling TV subscription, and my husband is, theoretically, not. But while I didn't really see a need to get channels that I was used to never watching anyway, my husband was interested in getting Sling TV as a way to get much of the same programming he is used to getting already, only cheaper. Of course, Sling TV doesn't have agreements with any of the broadcast networks (yet). So upfront, Sunday NFL games—the whole reason my husband is still locked into cable TV—are not

The setup

Setting up Sling TV was as easy as you would expect a Web-based service to be—I downloaded the app on an iPhone as well as on a Roku 3 (which Dish sent me as review hardware), and after I entered my e-mail and my Sling TV password I was in. Dish told me the service was not yet available through a Web browser, but it will be soon. In fact, Dish lists a hearty handful of set-top boxes and mobile devices that Sling TV will be available on: Amazon Fire TV, Amazon Fire TV Stick, Google's Nexus Player, select LG Smart TVs, Roku players, Roku TV models, select Samsung Smart TVs, Xbox One from Microsoft, iOS, Android, Mac, and PC. One notable exception is Apple TV, whose API Dish says is too restrictive to permit support for its service. However, Sling subscribers can still mirror the Sling TV cast to their TVs from their iOS devices using AirPlay.

One interesting thing we found out was that Sling TV plans to offer targeted ads to its users, likely based on your browsing and viewing habits. A Dish spokesperson told Ars that "Sling TV will feature Dynamic Ad Insertion, allowing for targeted advertising that creates a better experience for the viewer, as well as advertisers and programmers." That business model is particularly smart, and it at least means that Sling TV won't be surviving on your subscription alone. (It might even mean that CNN's increasingly gruesome advertisements for all sorts of prescription drugs to treat stomach-turning ailments that you didn't even know existed could be mitigated.)

Once you've entered The Sling TV UI, you can choose from 12 channels: ESPN, ESPN2, TNT, TBS, Food Network, HGTV, Travel Channel, Adult Swim, Cartoon Network, Disney Channel, ABC Family, and CNN On iOS, I found that ESPN started playing as soon as I opened it for the first time. I'm not sure if that's an intentional placement of Sling's crown jewel at the front of its lineup, but I found it easy enough to change the channel simply by selecting the list icon up at the top right of the screen. This slides out a side panel from the right where you can choose from different categories of channels like "news" or "entertainment," or you can just select all channels. Considering that there are only 12 in the basic TV subscription, scrolling through everything in the horizontal list that appears under the video box is not too overwhelming. If you select one of those channels, the current programming on that channel will show up in another horizontal list below that, where you can scroll to the right to see what's playing in the coming hours and weeks.

At this point I should mention that I was only set up with the "The Best of Live TV" basic service, although smaller channel add-ons will be available for an extra $5 per month. These add-ons include "Kids Extra," which comes with Disney Junior, Disney XD, Boomerang, Baby TV, and Duck TV, as well as "News & Info Extra," which comes with HLN, Cooking Channel, DIY, and Bloomberg TV. Dish says that a "Sports Extra" package is coming soon, although it's unclear what will be included in that (NFL Sunday match-ups would be a real—pardon my pun—game changer).

Sling TV now includes AMC and IFC in its $20 cord-cutter package

If you're still hearing arguments against cord cutting, your frenemies are probably saying that you can't watch Better Call Saul, Mad Men and Portlandia without resorting to piracy. Now that IFC and AMC are joining Sling TV's basic $20 a month "Best of Live TV" package, you can shove their words right back into their stupid jerk faces. For the moment, you'll only be able to watch the shows as they're broadcast, but Sling is promising that on-demand services are coming soon. In addition, the long-promised "Hollywood Extra" bolt-on will launch, offering movie content from EPIX and Sundance TV. We'd make a labored pun about you slinging your cable subscription into the trash, but someone else probably already did it.

just an update. After my trial period I have decided that Vue is hands down so far above sling that it makes sling look like a startup internet channel.

Now with that said, It does have its issues. It does have a guide but it is slow to draw and react. This same issue is throughout the entire vue interface. slow to display everything.

I have had a few mini skips during a few shows but compared to sling it has been super rare. I have had shows just stop. Can sit there frozen for a few seconds or longer but it always comes back right where it left off. Never once have I had a show just stop at the end of the show like happened all the time with sling. I have not watched any sports but overall the video quality has been very good, it is a bit soft but overall acceptable. Not really any worse then slings.

I will be staying with vue and can only hope they will fix the slowness issues of the interface. Even if they dont, the service overall is just so much better than sling that there is no way I will go back to sling.

I agree with you Darren...no way could I ever go back to Sling after having Vue. I too have had a few issues where you are watching a program and it will skip for a few seconds but like you said it starts right back where it left off. I really like having the cloud based DVR. I did notice that the skips seems to be more with DVR stuff than live tv so I found that after I fast forward a DVR show if I hit the pause button for about 1-2 seconds after fast forwarding, the show will no longer skip while viewing. If Sling adds the same channels as Vue and integrates a cloud based DVR then I might consider giving Sling another try but as Sling is right now...no way would I go back. I really wish Vue would come to Roku devices. I sold my Roku's and switched to Amazon Fire TV just because Vue was so good but I prefer Roku any day to Amazon Fire TV. Sling has been out for over a year now just like Vue and they haven't made many changes at all. Also I am loving that I can stream up to 5 devices at a time in my home so the kids can watch what they want and my wife and I can watch different things all at the same time. With Sling we were limited to one device at a time so I actually subscribed to two Sling accounts to be able to watch on two devices so by cancelling Sling it paid for one Vue subscription.

Going along with my second week of Vue....and it is far superior to Sling. @ Darren mentioned above, the really weak point is the Program Guide interface. Wish they would get that corrected. I am using the Amazon Fire to access the service and have had no problems. Very happy with Vue so far.

Darren • a year ago

I have had sling tv since the first month it hit fire tv. Back then it was horrible, try watching the walking dead, nope it would crap out on you. While that has gotten better, it still happens once in a while but what happens all the freaking time to me is constant minor skips that are only a couple seconds at a time. Causing you to miss key little moments or dialog in a show. Mind you, 200 meg down, no issues with any other service, no skipping or stopping. Every other service out there works great. Also random stops while watching a show. I cant tell you how often on both my fire tvs, I will be watching a show and the last 30 seconds to a minute, the show just freezes and sits there. Never doing anything else until you hit the channel and click on it likr you were clicking on it for the first time and boom there it is. This is a constant problem. I call slings tech support and nope, no answer. They act like they have never seen this before yet its all over the internet with people having similar problems.

I just started the vue trial a few hours ago. Here is my 2 hour quick review so far. I thought slings guide interface was bad and omg it so is, But vues interface is worse but in a different way. To many clicks to get to the channel you want then clearing al the onscreen crap so you can actually watch the show, The guide needs to be more simplified. I dont need to know what other users are watching, we should be able to turn off a bunch of these menu settings. Now in reading a guide for this, its obvious it was made for the playstation controller so the regular remote on the fire tv just doesnt have enough buttons to do it properly.

Was wondering why Vue didn't have an Android app, then saw that unlike Sling, Vue is a participating provider for the channels' own Android apps (Fox News Go, WatchESPN, CNNgo, etc). So an actual Vue app isn't all that necessary. Cool.

Has anyone tried the DVR and On Demand services offered by PlayStation? If so, how do they work? Thanks!

Joshua > Josh • a year ago

Yeah I have added a few shows to the dvr...its pretty cool. You just select which shows you want to have in your cloud dvr and it will record future shows and it also will give you 2-3 past episodes that you can watch on demand. Vue is everything I wanted Sling to be but they just haven't advanced like I thought they would. I don't understand how Sony was able to hammer out a deal with the content providers to allow up to 5 streams per account and Sling says they are limited by their providers to just one stream at a time?

Thanks for the reply. I really appreciate the info. I'm so skeptical cause this service seems too good to be true. Like, the only downside for me, is that it's not on Roku. lol. Because of this review and your comments, I'm signing up for a free trial this weekend. Thanks!

Same goes for me...I don't own a PlayStation so I am just using 3 fire tv's.

Rob • a year ago

After a couple of hours on the phone with CS.....you DO need to have a Playstation 3 or 4 to sign up for this service. The Amazon fire unit can only be used as a supplemental unit.

If anyone has proof that the above is incorrect, please advise with exact details before I return the AZ fire unit

Thanks !

How to Watch iHeartRadio Music Awards Online

Variety Staff

MARCH 5, 2017 | 03:53PM PT

LATOOUR/VARIETY/REX/SHUTTERSTOCK

The iHeartRadio Music Awards are taking place on Sunday, with an impressive line-up of performers that includes Katy Perry, Bruno Mars, the Chainsmokers, and Shawn Mendes.

Music fans likely won't want to miss out on the show, which is airing live on TNT, TBS, and truTV. If you're not near a TV, there are a couple of ways that you can stream all the action online.

The easiest way may be to watch via the iHeartRadio app. And don't forget, the key word here is "radio." The awards show will be aired on all iHeartRadio channels nationwide, as well as on its app. It's available for free download on mobile, desktop, and tablet via iTunes, Google Play, Amazon, and more.

Another way to watch without cable is through online streaming service Sling TV. The service starts at $20 per month, but there's a seven-day free trial for first-timers. Just be sure to select the Best of Live TV package — it doesn't include truTV, but does include TNT and TBS.

If you do have a cable subscription, but just aren't near a computer, you can enter your cable login information into any of the networks' apps or websites and stream the show for free.

iHeartRadio is also streaming the red carpet, which starts at 3 p.m. PST/6 p.m. EST, live on Facebook. The 2017 iHeartRadio Music Awards starts at 5 p.m. PST/8 p.m. EST.

Sling TV Adds Multi-Stream Option, Fox Content

BY ANGELA MOSCARITOLO APRIL 13, 2016 01:05PM EST 0
COMMENTS

Sling TV's "multi-stream" service lets you stream content on up to three devices simultaneously.

Sling TV is launching a new option for cord cutters.

The company's new "multi-stream" service lets you watch content on up to three devices simultaneously. The $20 monthly service, which is available now in beta, also — for the first time — gives Sling TV customers access to channels from the Fox Networks Group, including local broadcast news in select markets, Fox Sports, FX, and National Geographic.

Similar to Sling TV's single-stream service, the new multi-stream offering will also include A&E, Adult Swim, AMC, Bloomberg, Cartoon Network, CNN, El Rey, Flama, Food Network, Galavision, HGTV, History, IFC, Lifetime, Local NOW, Maker, Newsy, Polaris+, TBS, TNT, Travel Channel, truTV, UniMás, Univision, and Viceland.

Multi-stream subscribers can also add "Extras" for $5 more per month for more Hollywood, lifestyle, or world news content. And, if you're a premium channel lover, you can get HBO for $15 more per month or Cinemax for an extra $10.

"If you subscribe to our Best of Live TV beta multi-stream service, you can watch Sling TV on up to three devices at the same time in or out of your home," the Sling TV team wrote in a blog post. "Any Extras added to your subscription will also be included in your three streams. With three streams, the beta multi-stream service is perfect for families, roommates or multi-television households."

RELATED

Sling TV

There are some drawbacks, though. The single-stream option, which also costs $20 per month, includes some channels not available for multi-stream customers, like ESPN, ESPN2, and the Disney Channel. Multi-stream customers also can't select the $5 Sports and Kids add-ons. You could subscribe to both for $40 per month, but then you get some duplicate content.

New Sling TV subscribers can sign up for the multi-stream service on the company's website, or via compatible Roku devices, Xbox One consoles, and Android devices. If you're already a Sling TV customer, you can upgrade by logging into your account or calling customer service. The service is available on all Sling TV-supported devices.

"We see this as just the beginning — as we evolve the multi-stream service, we plan to incorporate your feedback, add more channels and include features that will make Sling TV even better," the company wrote.

Sling TV Launches On Apple TV And Adds New Channels

POSTED BY: ERIC ANTHONY JUNE 13, 2016

Finally, Sling TV has rounded out their device support. Today, Sling TV officially announced they have launched on the 4th generation Apple TV. The new Apple TV app also features the debut of the brand new user interface that Sling TV first showed off at CES back in January 2016.

Along with the big announcement, Sling TV also had a couple other big pieces of news:

Sling TV Adds Viacom Channels

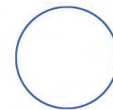

After much speculation of the Dish Network / Viacom agreement getting held up by Sling's desire to add Viacom channels, Sling TV has officially added 12 Viacom channels. These channels include:

- Comedy Central
- BET
- Spike
- MTV
- Nick Jr.
- VH1 and more

How will these channels fit in? According to Sling TV, the packages will change as follows:

Step 1- Install DriverUpdate™. Step 2- Scan. Step 3- Update Missing Drivers! Go to driverupdate.net

Single-stream Best of Live TV Updates

Sling TV's $20 per month Best of Live TV single-stream service will now include Comedy Central. The other Viacom channels will be spread across the following channels:

- Kids Extra: Nick Jr., NickToons, TeenNick, Disney Jr., Disney XD, Boomerang, Baby TV and Duck TV.
- Comedy Plus Extra: MTV, Spike, MTV2, Logo, CMT, TV Land and truTV.
- Lifestyle Plus Extra: VH1, BET, Cooking Channel, DIY, FYI, WE TV and Lifetime Movie Network.

Beta Multi-Stream Updates

Comedy Central, Nick Jr. and BET will be added to the core package of the multi-stream service. The other channels will be as follows:

- Kids Extra – Beta: NickToons, TeenNick, Boomerang, Baby TV and Duck TV.
- Comedy Plus Extra – Beta: MTV, Spike, MTV2, Logo, CMT and TV Land.
- Lifestyle Plus Extra – Beta: VH1, Cooking Channel, DIY, FYI, WE TV and Lifetime Movie Network.

Sling TV Adds FS2, FXX, and Nat Geo WILD Content

Sling TV is also working hard to round out their Beta multi-stream package with more FOX-owned channels. This includes FXX (yay Always Sunny in Philadelphia!), FS2 (great news for soccer fans), and Nat Geo WILD. FXX and Nat Geo WILD will only feature on-demand content, however.

For more information on the big news from Sling TV today, read the official statement on Sling TV's blog shortly.

AJ Styles confronted Shane McMahon backstage at the conclusion of last week's 'SmackDown Live.' (WWE.com)

Tonight on SmackDown Live, Shane McMahon will respond to AJ Styles' outburst at the end of last week's show. Plus, John Cena and Nikki Bella respond to The Miz and Maryse's attack. SmackDown will air tonight at 8:00 p.m on the USA Network. For those wrestling fans who don't have a cable subscription, there are a few ways you can watch the show online for free. Here's what you need to do.

If You Don't Have a Cable or Satellite Log-In That Includes USA

John Cena and Nikki Bella are expected to fight The Miz and Maryse at WrestleMania. (WWE.com)

If you're in the United States and don't have access to a cable or satellite log-in, you can watch SmackDown through Sling TV, an online streaming service that provides access to select channels for a monthly fee. The service's Sling Blue package, which includes USA, costs $25 a month. But if you're looking for a way to watch SmackDown for free, you can do so with Sling's free 7-day trial.

To sign up for Sling, follow these steps:

1. Click here to sign up for Sling TV. You'll need to enter your credit card information when signing up, but if you cancel your subscription before the trial period ends, you will not be charged.
2. When you sign up, select Sling's Best of Live TV Blue package, which costs $25 per month. You'll also have the option of selecting "add-ons," all of which come with a monthly fee but are included in the free trial. The Best of Live TV Blue package is the only one that includes USA.
3. Download the Sling desktop app, and navigate over to USA to watch SmackDown.

With an App:

If you sign up for the free Sling trial, you can watch SmackDown on the Sling app, which you can download for free in the App store or the Google Play store. There's also a Sling app for Roku, Chromecast, Nexus player, ZTE and Xbox One. Click here for a full list of compatible devices.

The service's Best of Live TV Blue package costs $25 a month. But if you're looking for a way to watch a week's worth of WWE events for free, you can do so with Sling's free 7-day trial.

To sign up for Sling, follow these steps:

1. Click here to sign up for Sling TV. You'll need to enter your credit card information when signing up, but if you cancel your subscription before the trial period ends, you will not be charged.

3. Download the Sling mobile app or utilize the app on your connected TV, and navigate over to USA to watch SmackDown.

If you sign up for the free Sling trial you can also watch SmackDown for free on a phone, tablet or connected TV via the USA app, which you can download for free in the App Store, the Google Play store, the Amazon App store or the Windows Store. When you're prompted to select your TV provider, select Sling and enter your username and password.

If You Have a Cable or Satellite Log-In That Includes USA

Randy Orton will face Bray Wyatt at WrestleMania. (WWE.com)

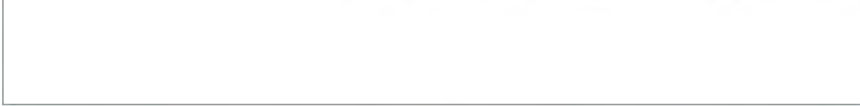

If you subscribe to USA and just need a way to watch SmackDown outside the confines of a television, the network makes it quite easy to do so.

All you have to do is head over to USA's official livestream page, where you'll be asked to enter your cable login information. Once you have been authenticated with your username and password, the stream will begin, and what you're seeing will be exactly what is being broadcast on television at that moment. Pull it up on a laptop a few minutes before showtime and you're good to go.

With an App:

Hoping to watch SmackDown on the go? Don't sweat it; you don't even need a computer to watch the USA network. Once again you have to be a cable subscriber, but you can view the episode live via a smartphone or tablet by downloading the USA Now app.

Once you open the app, simply hit the button in the top right corner, which will pull up a "LIVE" option. Click on that, log in with your cable information, and the exact same high-quality stream from the USA's website will launch up on your iOS or Android device. The app is also available on Apple TV, Roku and the Xbox One.

Sling TV review

Sling TV is live cable TV without the headache

By Nick Pino 8 days ago AV accessories

OUR VERDICT

Sling TV lays the foundation for a dream service for cord cutters, but it can be hindered by poor performance on certain for those without a solid internet connection. While buffering and stuttering can be an issue, however, performance on iOS and PC is generally pretty good.

FOR

- Available for streaming anywhere
- No setup, equipment or contract
- Add-on content
- On-demand TV shows

AGAINST

- Functions aren't consistent
- Unhelpful search function
- Major performance issues on some platforms

Update: Own an Amazon Fire TV? Sling TV will now allow you to join its cloud DVR program for $5 per month. Called First Look, the cloud DVR feature allows you to save and record up to 50 hours of programming to your account. The program started back in December with Roku players and Roku TVs, and has plans to come to Apple TV in the near future.

We all love keeping up with the TV shows that everyone's talking about, but there's no denying that having cable TV can be a complete pain.

That's why Sling TV is attempting to stick a wooden stake into cable by offering the same great shows without the costly bill at the end of the month, not to mention the expensive equipment cluttering up that prize real estate space underneath your TV.

Sling isn't the only live TV streaming game in town – Sony has PlayStation Vue and AT&T recently unveiled its TV replacement called DirecTV Now – but Sling is still the best ways to watch TV on the go. Said simply, it's live TV streaming whenever and wherever. No contracts, no equipment and no costly statement.

Sling TV? Is it the same thing as a Slingbox?

While there are some concepts borrowed from Slingbox, Sling TV is in a different league when it comes to cutting the cord.

Sling TV is a US-only service offered from DISH that allows you to watch the channels you'd typically find on basic cable for $20 a month without a contract, subscription to DISH or any pesky cable equipment on your roof or in your living room.

What devices can I use to watch it?

Create an account on DISH's website and use that info to login to the app on iOS, Android, Apple TV, Amazon Fire TV and Amazon Fire TV Stick, Google's Nexus Player, Xbox One, the new Chromecast via the Sling TV app, any Android TV system and nearly every Roku device. A complete list of supported products can be found on Sling's website.

The system is more eloquent than apps like TWC TV or Xfinity, and while the latter is almost universally available, trying to remember whose name and email you use to login can ruin a session before it even starts.

It's also worth noting that Sling TV has partnered up with T-Mobile to offer subscribers unlimited streaming video on their T-Mobile smartphones and tablets without eating into their LTE data.

What channels are included?

Channel packages can be a bit confusing, but it helps if you imagine them like a cafeteria lunch line. First things first: you're going to need an entree to get started. Your two options are Sling Orange and Sling Blue. If you're the only person who plans on watching Sling TV in the house, you want Orange. If you plan on sharing it with the whole family, you're going to want to go Blue.

So far, channels on the basic, $20-per-month plan (now called Sling Orange) include ESPN, ESPN2, ESPN3, TNT, TBS, HGTV, DIY Network, Food Network, Travel Channel, CNN, Cartoon Network, ABC Family, Disney Channel, AMC, IFC and, most recently, A&E, History, H2, Lifetime, Bloomberg, Polaris+, Newsy, Flama, a music entertainment channel called AXS TV and, most recently, a tech channel called Cheddar that you can only find on Sling TV.

Sling Blue shares many of the same channels, but allows more than one person to be watching at a time and costs $25 per month. It also should be noted that Sling Blue doesn't have any of the Disney-owned channels, and instead has channels from the Fox, NBC and Viacom families.

Once you've selected your basic package, it's time to look at the dessert options.

If you're looking to tack on some of the premium channels, Sling TV offers both HBO and Cinemax for $15 and $10 a month, respectively, however they require a subscription to the "Best of Live TV" package. Not to be left out, STARZ has also joined the premium pay-TV group by offering its channels, STARZ and STARZ Encore, for an extra $9 per month.

In addition to the two base subscriptions and the premium options listed above, nine add-on packages are available for an additional $5 apiece each month:

- Kids Extra, with Disney Jr, Disney XD, Boomerang, Duck TV, Baby TV, TeenNick, NickToons and Nick Jr.
- Sports Extra, which includes the SEC Network, ESPNEWS, ESPNU, Universal Sports, Univision Deportes, beIN Sports, ESPN Buzzer Beater, ESPN Bases Loaded, ESPN Goal Line, Campus Insiders and Outside Television.
- Comedy extra, which includes MTV, TruTV, Spike, MTV2, CMT, Logo, TV Land and GSN.
- Lifestyle extra, with Cooking Channel, DIY, truTV, WE tv, FYI, LMN, VH1, BET, Vibrant, Oxygen and E!
- Hollywood Extra, which includes live and video-on-demand content from EPIX, EPIX2, EPIX3, EPIX Drive-In, Sundance TV, Turner Classic Movies (TCM) and HDNet Movies
- World News Extra, with Fusion, HLN, News 18 India, Euronews, NDTV 24x7, France24, RT, BBC World News, MSNBC, CNBC and TheBlaze.
- Deportes Extra includes Azteca, beIN Español, beIN HD (English), Univision, Univision Deportes and UniMás.
- Películas & Novelas Extra includes Azteca Corazon, Cinelatino, De Película, De Película Clasico, Pasiones, Univision tlnovelas, Univision and UniMás.
- Broadcast Extra (only available in select cities) includes ABC, Univision and UniMas.

It's a long list, and one that continually grows month after month.

Functionality

Now, remember when you asked about Slingbox? Well, it's true, Sling TV and Slingbox share a few similarities beyond the first syllable.

Sling TV allows you to pause, rewind and fast-forward live TV on some channels (note the word "some" there), and grants you the ability to watch shows a few days after they've aired.

Also similar to Slingbox, Sling TV lets you watch its service on most mobile devices anywhere in the world. That is, as long as you can establish and maintain a bitrate of about 1.5 Mbps for high-quality streams, 0.8Mbps for medium resolution, and 0.5 Mbps for low-quality.

That all said, where Sling TV runs into a bit of trouble is when you take streams from a smaller screen and put it on a bigger one. We found that Sling TV performed the best on an iPhone SE – the stream was crisp and clear, and audio came through perfectly.

Throw it from a mobile device onto the big screen via Chromecast, however, and everything goes awry – quality dips in and out, while audio goes from pristine cable quality to a crackly garbled mess.

One function that I felt was a huge weak point on every platform, however, was the ability to search for the show you want to watch – search exists on every platform, but it's not complete and often returns results that don't make sense.

Try searching "Game of Thrones", for example, and Sling TV spits out dozens of results – random news shows that featured a Game of Thrones segment, a behind the scenes look at the making of Game of Thrones, everything but the show itself.

Cloud DVR on Sling TV

While searching is somewhat of a headache, Sling TV does offer a cloud DVR service similar to what we've seen on PlayStation

Vue. The feature, called First Look, allows you to save up to 50 hours of content to your account that you can watch at a later date – think on-demand, but you get to pick the shows.

The program costs $5 per month extra, and is currently only available on Roku devices, Roku TVs, Amazon Fire TV and Fire TV Stick, and Amazon tablets.

Sling TV Orange? Is that some sort of fruit drink?

Nope! (Well ... not yet anyway.)

One of Sling TV's biggest challenges has been that two viewers in the same family couldn't watch a stream at the same time – at least that's the way it was when the service started last year.

But Sling TV now comes in two forms: Sling Orange, which follows the old model's service by only allowing one person to watch a stream at a time, and Sling Blue, which allows many people in the same family stream at the same time. Sling Orange will cost the same as the original service ($20 per month) while Sling Blue will be slightly more at $25 per month.

Sling TV on Roku

While Sling TV really excelled on iOS (which we'll get to in a minute), it also played just fine on Roku's OS, specifically if you're using a Roku 3, Roku 4 or one of the newer 2016 systems.

By and large, the experience on Roku was everything I've come to love about a cable box: simple functionality, clean layout and crisp picture. Installing the app was as easy as going to Roku channel store, finding the Sling TV app and pushing it to my Roku 3.

Coming from the home screen, Sling TV's interface loads up in a matter of seconds. The time it takes to get from home screen to live TV is astonishing - it's leagues faster than the time it takes my DirecTV cable box to boot up.

Once loaded, the stream was crisp and clear. (This obviously is a YMMV situation, as my home setup isn't identical - or even necessarily in the same ballpark - as everyone else.) A quick test of my network showed I was pulling around 26Mbps over Wi-Fi, which worked fairly well at high-quality 1080p 99% of the time.

The only stark contrast to traditional cable, at this point at least, is the amount of content available on Sling TV.

Comparatively, the 40-or-so channels offered on Sling TV are just a drop in the bucket compared to the over-800 I have available on DirecTV. And because you aren't able to record a show like you can on TiVo, you're limited to watching whatever's on or whatever's been on in the past few days.

Sling TV on iOS

Sling TV on iOS is a vastly different experience. Not only are you trading down to a smaller screen size, but you're also losing connection stability and clean interface of the set-top app.

Using an iPhone 5S for testing, I took Sling TV with me for a gauntlet of daily errands. As you might expect, over LTE the stream was nearly flawless. Dropping down to 3G, however, presented real problems as seconds slipped away to buffering screens.

Problematically, when you return home, continuing what you were watching on your phone isn't as simple as starting up your Roku. You'll need to go into the menu, find the show you were watching and rewind it manually.

Trying to use both a phone and a Roku at the same time won't work either (unless you subscribe to Sling Blue). DISH is clearly (and rightfully) afraid of the account-sharing trap that has befallen HBO Go and Netflix, and doesn't allow two devices using the same account to run the service simultaneously.

Overall, I found the iOS experience less enjoyable than the set-top app, but still impressive. Being able to take TV figuratively anywhere is an appealing, practical proposition for morning commuters or long-distance travelers.

Sling TV on Amazon Fire TV

The interface on Amazon Fire TV looks almost identical to the service on Roku, which is to say clean and convenient. Pressing the "list" button on Fire TV remotes brings up a channel listing while the three media control buttons do their things on playback-enabled channels.

The service looks a little clearer than it did on Roku - Sling probably set the highest visual quality as a default on Amazon devices - but it does seem to hit a few more snags. The system was stuck in buffering for such a long time at one point that it completely shut off. Whether this was a one-time fluke or a persistent problem remains to be seen...

Sling TV on Xbox One

When I heard Sling was shooting for five platforms in five months, I had my doubts it could keep up with the development pace. Yet here we are just two months later talking about the fourth version of the system, Xbox One.

If you've used the service on any of the set-top boxes so far, you'll probably know what to expect here.

The channel interface is brought up with a flick of the stick in any direction, while the menu button (formerly known as start) opens up a menu for video-on-demand movies. Last but not least is the share button (again, formerly known as back) that brings up a menu that filters channels by category.

One major change worth noting is that Sling - unlike some apps on Xbox One - actually utilizes the Kinect to take in voice commands and allows you to pin both video-on-demand and specific channels to your home screen.

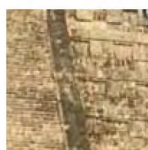

During testing I noticed a fair bit of latency (38ms compared to 30 on my tablet), which caused the service to stop and stutter multiple times. This occurred with a 4.24Mbps download speed and could be a worrying sign for potential Xbox One users.

Overall the service looks great and is functionally stable on Xbox One, but its performance - as users have noted in the comments - will definitely vary depending on your connection speed.

[Editor's Note: We haven't tried the service on Android TV, however we will update the review with that section when we do.]

Sling TV adds new channels from Viacom and Fox as it launches on Apple TV

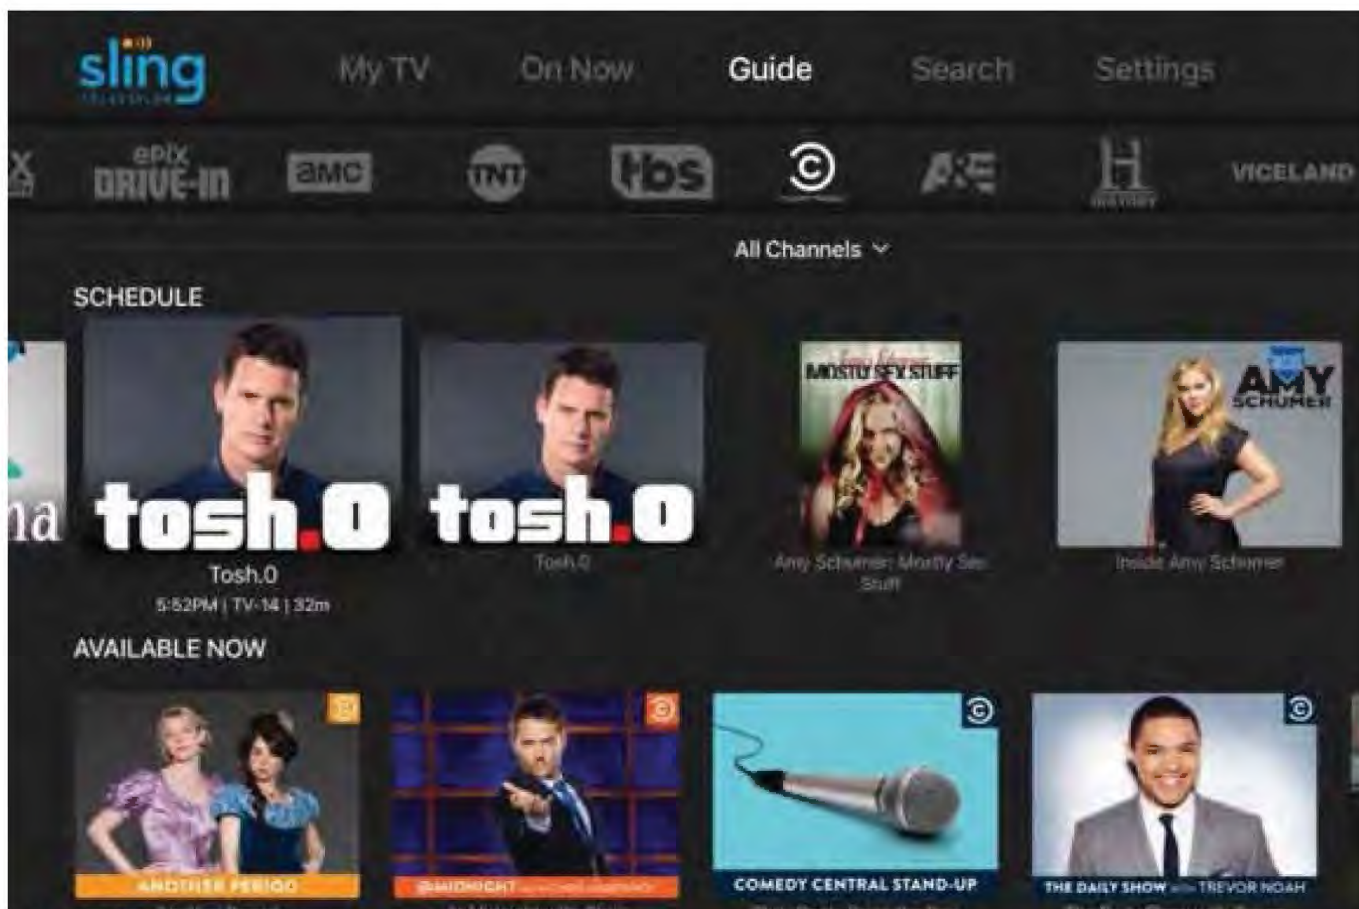

Alongside a new version of Sling TV for the Apple TV, Sling adds a dozen new channels from Viacom and three from Fox. Most are available on both the single and multi-stream service.

Credit: Sling

Sling expanded its channel lineup by 15 channels on Monday, coinciding with the release of its new Apple TV app and a redesigned user interface. With the addition of Viacom and new Fox-owned content, Sling TV now has more than 365 channels with approximately 50,000 hours of on-demand and replay content.

Comedy Central is now part of Sling's $20 per month "Best of Live TV" streaming offering, with the other 11 channels added to Sling's various "extra" channel packages, available for an additional $5 per month.

Nick Jr., NickToons, TeenNick, Disney Jr., Disney XD, Boomerang, Baby TV and Duck TV have been added to the Kids Extra package, while a new Comedy Plus Extra option includes MTV, Spike, MTV2, Logo, CMT, TV Land and truTV. The Lifestyle Extra package is now Lifestyle Plus extra and adds H1, BET, Cooking Channel, DIY, FYI, WE TV, and Lifetime Movie Network.

If you're subscribed to the beta multi-stream service, the "Best of Live TV" option will now include Nick Jr and BET as well as Comedy Central. The rest of Viacom's new Sling live TV channels will be available through similar extra packages as the single-stream service.

Multi-stream customers also gain three new live channels to the basic package from Fox owned networks FXX, Nat Geo Wild, and FS2. That brings the total channels on the beta multi-stream service to 36 (27 on the single-stream option).

The bad news? Sling still hasn't addressed some of the channel discrepancies that we pointed out at the launch of the multi-stream option back in April. You still can't get channels including ESPN, ESPN2, Disney Channel, and Freeform. The same is generally applicable for the Extra packages, which are still also missing some content for multi-stream subscribers.

Why this matters: While we're glad Viacom is making its content available across both of Sling TV's service options, we'd still like to see the company work to streamline content options and simplify their product offering. We think in the end having two service options is a bit confusing.

SHORT CIRCUIT

Navigating Sling TV's Increasingly Complex Offerings

CB

CHRIS BRANTNER

Jul 1 2016, 9:30am

Sling TV is adding channels, and complexity, to its streaming television offerings.

Over the last year-and-a-half, cord cutting options have exploded. While it used to be that cord cutters could only legally watch content on demand, Sling TV changed all of that back in January 2015 by offering the first ever linear live streaming service. The initial offering comprised about 20 channels for a flat fee of $20 per month. Simple, cheap, and easy.

However, the original package only met the needs of certain viewers. Sure you could finally get ESPN without cable, but there was still a big hole without FS1 or NBCSN. Then PlayStation Vue went nationwide and filled that gap with a bit more expensive service, but the lack of device support and confusion over the PlayStation name seems to have held it back (why didn't they call it Sony Vue or VueTV like this Reddit thread suggested?).

Fast forward a couple of months and Sling TV released their beta Multi-stream package with a FOX lineup that included FS1 and even some regional sports channels. This package was also priced at $20 per month, but had plenty of overlapping channels with their standard core "Best of Live TV" package. The difference? It didn't include ESPN or the other Disney-owned channels, but it allowed users to stream on up to three devices simultaneously (the ESPN package only allows for one stream at a time).

While the two packages made sense for some people depending on their channel needs, others looking for an overall multi-sports solution had to basically purchase two separate packages with many of the same channels. So as you can imagine, things started to get a bit convoluted.

All of this lead up to Sling TV's newest major announcement. On June 30, Sling TV brought the Fox package out of beta and renamed it "Sling Blue". In the process, they bumped the price up to $25 per month and added a ton of new channels. A few notable additions include: NBC live stream in select markets, NBCSN, USA, BRAVO, and SyFy, and BBC America.

If you were already subscribing to the Multi-stream Beta package, have no fear. A Sling TV spokesperson assured Motherboard that "all beta users for multi-stream will remain at their $20 price point with their current subscription." That comes along with the new channels, so if you got in early, you're in luck.

The original "Best of Live TV" package has been renamed "Sling Orange" and remains at the same $20 price point. The only real difference with this package is they added BBC America.

Need the channels in both packages? Sling is offering a $5 discount if you sign up for both Sling Blue and Sling Orange, putting you at $40 per month. From here you still have the option to include extra add-on packages, such as Sports Extra and Lifestyle Plus Extra. Sling also made some changes here, the most notable of which are the additions of the Golf Channel to the Sports Extra package, as well as E! and Oxygen to the Lifestyle package. They also revamped the World News package with BBC World News, CNBC, and MSNBC to the World News package.

Whew—that's a mouthful! The options are many, but admittedly it's a bit to work through. Sling TV is walking a thin line between providing true skinny bundle packages at the most affordable prices on the market and the confusing nature of cord cutting that has kept many from breaking up with cable in the first place.

Either way you look at it, Sling TV is beefing up its offerings to become a more legitimate cable TV alternative. The addition of NBC and NBCSN means Sling TV customers can watch the Tour de France online, not to mention get all the Olympics coverage they want (NBC has the rights to broadcast the Olympics through 2032).

Sling TV is walking a thin line between providing true skinny bundle packages and the confusing nature of cord cutting that has kept many from breaking up with cable in the first place.

As for NFL? According to a Sling spokesperson, "Viewers in the markets where NBC and Fox are available will be able to watch live NFL games, subject to the same mobile blackouts." Good news for many football fans out there.

Admittedly, it's a lot to take in and digest. But if you're still scratching your head trying to wrap your mind around the changes, keep in mind that you can try any and all the packages for seven days with a free trial. You can also go here and click the chat button at the bottom to get an explanation from a customer service rep.

Hey, it's a lot better than calling Comcast.

Sling TV now supports Chromecast, free trial included

BY TODD HASLTON | NOVEMBER 3, 2015

Sling TV announced on Tuesday that it now officially supports the Google Chromecast on Android and iOS devices.

Once you have the latest Sling TV application installed, you'll be able to load up your favorite channel and then cast that content directly to any display connected to a Chromecast or Google Cast-enabled device, such as the NVIDIA SHIELD TV. Once the content starts casting, you can view it on your TV, smartphone or tablet.

To celebrate, Sling TV is offering up a free two-month trial of its “Best of Live TV” package to new customers who own Chromecasts. Also, customers who decide to sign up for that package and pay for three months up front are eligible to receive a free Chromecast device.

Mac and Windows casting support is coming later, Sling said.

Cinemax Is Now Available To Cord Cutters, But Only On Sling TV

Posted Feb 11, 2016 by Sarah Perez (@sarahintampa)

HBO's move to offer a version of its service aimed cord cutters has inspired other premium cable TV networks to do the same, including, most recently Showtime which debuted its standalone streaming service last summer, and later brought it to Hulu. Today, Cinemax is testing the waters, too, and is now making its content available for the first time to those who don't subscribe to cable or satellite television.

The catch in this case is that it's not pitching its own dedicated cross-platform streaming app, but has rather partnered with Internet TV service, Sling TV.

Owned by Dish Network, Sling TV is an effort to bring the best of cable television – including movies, lifestyle channels, family programming, news, and most notably, ESPN – to those who have cut the cord with their traditional TV provider.

The company already offers some premium content to subscribers who choose to add-on various packages to its core lineup. For example, Sling TV resells HBO to subscribers much in the same way that cable TV companies today do.

In fact, Sling's version of HBO is not considered HBO NOW (HBO's option for cord cutters), as it's only available to watch within Sling TV itself, and not in HBO's standalone HBO NOW mobile or TV apps.

Sling also offers EPIX's movies in its $5 per month "Hollywood Extra" add-on pack.

The similarities between the way Sling TV operates and a traditional cable TV subscription could be why it's the first platform to gain access to Cinemax over-the-top.

According to the company's announcement, Sling TV subscribers can now add on a Cinemax package a la carte for $10 more per month on top of Sling's $20 per month "Best of Live TV" base package, or one of its International base packages.

The $10 fee will offer viewers access to a live, linear channel that can be found in Sling's programming guide as well as the network's collection of on-demand content, including both movies and TV shows.

This is the same on-demand catalog you would otherwise be able to access if you paid for Cinemax through a cable TV subscription and then used the MAX GO app to watch while on mobile devices, the company notes.

Unlike HBO, which has one of cable TV's most-watched shows with "Game of Thrones," Cinemax's original series are lesser-known, and include titles like "Strike Back," "Hunted," "The Knick," and “Banshee.” It’s also soon introducing a couple of new series, “Quarry” and “Outcast.”

However, the network does rotate through a decent selection of movies, and, of course, it’s known for its sore-core “After Dark” content, too. In total, the channel will offer over 500 movies and TV shows on demand.

“Sling TV is the first live standalone Internet TV service to deliver Cinemax to an audience of cord-cutters and cord-nevers,” said Sling TV CEO Roger Lynch, in a statement. “This announcement comes only days after we celebrated Sling TV’s one-year anniversary. Over the past year, we’ve established a history of industry firsts, and the addition of Cinemax is evidence of our intent to uphold this swift innovative pace.”

The challenge for premium cable TV channels in the cord cutting era is being able to gain a significant subscriber base in the face of heavy competition from major players with large catalogs, like Netflix, Amazon and Hulu. Not only do these services often cost less, some even include the premium channel’s own content – like Amazon offers older HBO series, and others may have similar movie catalogs at times.

HBO, despite being one of the most popular premium networks is now realizing how stiff the competition really is – the company said earlier this week it had grown its over-the-top service to just 800,000 subscribers, which was less than the analyst estimates of 1 to 2 million.

Sling TV adds TCM, game channel Polaris+

✔ Best of Live TV Package

Watch for only $20/mo

The Best of Live TV also sports, plus newswomen, breaking news, and more, with ESPN, TNT, TBS, AMC, Adult Swim, Disney Channel, Food Network, HGTV, Cartoon Network, Polaris+, and others. Featuring SportsCenter, NBA on TNT, Cheppert, Property Brothers, Adventure Time, and so much more!

By THE DENVER POST | newsroom@denverpost.com

PUBLISHED: June 19, 2015 at 7:30 am | UPDATED: April 23, 2016 at 11:42 pm

For those keeping track, Sling TV added its 23rd channel to its basic plan, which costs $20 a month. But it's an unusual choice: Maker Studios' Polaris+, a channel focusing on the video-gaming industry.

The rest of the lineup is familiar and traditional pay-TV brands, like ESPN, HGTV and the Disney Channel. When parent Dish Network announced Sling TV in January, creators wanted to differentiate it from pay TV in more ways than just lower price and how one can watch it. The idea was also to not crowd the lineup with too many channels.

Polaris+, formerly "The Game Station," has the distinction of joining Sling's "Best of Live TV" core package. Even the familiar and also-newly added Turner Classic Movies channel, or TCM, is bumped up to a tier — the Hollywood Extra pack, which costs $5 more per month.

Sling's choice to add Polaris+ appears linked to its core customer: Millennials. Since Sling has actively pursued this market of non-paying TV customers, gaming and pop-culture channels make sense. Gaming videos continue to be a huge attraction for, well, gamers. It's a reason why Amazon spent nearly $1 billion last year on gaming site Twitch, where gamers can watch other gamers play a game.

I'm waiting to hear back from Sling to find out how Polaris made it to the basic package.

The background on Polaris+ is that it is a channel from Maker Studios, a video network of people who make stuff. The Walt Disney Co. acquired Maker Studios last year for about $500 million. The Maker Studios channel is already part of Sling's basic TV plan.

Maker Studios appealed to Disney because of its shorter video format and young audience, Disney CEO Bob Iger told Variety last year. At the time, Maker Studios was also getting 5.5 billion views per month across its web network and Youtube.

The 23 channels that make up Sling TV:

Sling TV Gets HBO Ahead of 'Game of Thrones' Premiere

advertisement

It's getting easier and easier to watch "Game of Thrones" without a cable subscription or BitTorrent. Sling TV announced on Thursday that HBO would become available to subscribers. The streaming service's $20 "Best of Live TV" package already includes channels like ESPN, TNT, Food Network, AMC, Disney Channel and more. For an additional $20, they can now watch HBO live and get access to the channel's on-demand content. This comes a few days after HBO Now became available for the iPhone, iPad and Apple TV. The big difference between HBO on Sling TV and streaming services like HBO GO and HBO Now is that viewers will be able to watch new shows like "Game of Thrones" and "Silicon Valley" live. Consumers want fewer TV channels and lower monthly bills - will 'skinny' packages work?

With Netflix and Hulu's low-cost plans with on-demand access to movies and TV shows, consumers finally had options if they wanted to sever the cable cord. "Orange Is the New Black" is one of Netflix's series. (Paul Schiraldi/Netflix)

VH1 Classic, with music videos from the 1980s and '90s and movies like "The Breakfast Club," was designed as a nostalgic stop for channel surfers.

Viacom Inc. launched the channel 15 years ago during the last big boom in cable programming. Back then consumers were hauling home high-definition big screens, and cable and satellite TV operators were eager to offer cutting-edge lineups with hundreds of channels.

Media companies laid claim to the channel space. Viacom figured it could milk its valuable MTV and Nickelodeon brands by creating offshoot channels such as Nicktoons, MTV Hits, MTV Jams and others. VH1

Classic was a hot ticket, featuring footage from old Led Zeppelin and Rolling Stones concerts and documentaries on the Beatles.

But the world has changed.

American TV viewers receive an average 194 channels, and most people watch only about 17 — a number that has not budged despite the proliferation of networks, according to measurement firm Nielsen.

Networks such as VH1 Classic, Discovery Family, Esquire, ESPNu, Golf Channel and other sports outlets are part of a growing problem: too many little-watched channels that help ratchet up the cost of pay-TV packages. For some consumers, the bounty of channels represents waste.

"People don't want massive amount of choice — particularly if they have to pay for it," said Jeffrey Cole, director of the Center for the Digital Future at the USC Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism. "Most people hate the menu at the Cheesecake Factory because there are too many selections."

American TV viewers receive an average 194 channels, and most people watch only about 17 -- a number that has not budged despite the proliferation of network.

Consumers have been demanding fewer TV channels and lower monthly bills. Those pleas were largely ignored until Internet streaming services Netflix and Hulu began attracting customers with low-cost plans with on-demand access to movies and TV shows. Consumers finally had options if they wanted to sever the cable cord.

Cable, satellite and other distributors collectively shed an estimated 625,000 pay-TV customers during the second quarter of this year, according to a report Thursday by consulting firm SNL Kagan. That followed an uncharacteristic dip when the industry posted a first-quarter net loss; the first in more than five years.

Cord-cutters aren't the only problem. The industry is more fearful of a group they call "cord-nevers" — young consumers who move out of their parents' homes and don't sign up for a traditional pay-TV subscription.

"Changes are moving faster than a lot of people thought they would," said David Kenny, chief executive of the Weather Co., which owns the Weather Channel. "It is all riding on the rails of technology."

Breaking the bundle

Media executives recognize the need for reform, but have clung to the belief that an overwhelming majority of customers continues to be well served by big packages. Selling channels a la carte could ultimately cost consumers more, they say, because a much smaller pool of people would be subsidizing individual channels.

Breaking the bundle also would create a multibillion-dollar nightmare for media companies. Pay-TV packages provide the financial bedrock of the entertainment industry, generating $48 billion a year in programming fees.

But cracks are beginning to show. Wall Street this month dumped media stocks over fears that more consumers were cutting the cable cord.

The swift sell-off — which wiped out more than $50 billion in market value in just two days — started after Walt Disney Co. warned that profits from its juggernaut ESPN division would not be as robust as initial forecasts. Investors then sold shares of Time Warner, 21st Century Fox, Viacom, Comcast and Discovery, signaling that a high-stakes game of "survival of the fittest" is underway.

The largest programming companies have long leveraged their popular channels to strike advantageous deals with the pay-TV distributors.

Long-term programming contracts, for example, often stipulate that pay-TV distributors carry a company's entire family of channels — or pay a higher price if they wanted to distribute only the most popular ones.

The transition is "going to be harder for the guys who have made so much money for so long off the bundle," said Doug Creutz, media analyst with Cowen & Co.

Another reason for the foot-dragging: Major programming companies have had little incentive to purge channels because even those with skimpy ratings can be profitable.

VH1 Classic, for example, is available in 58 million homes and brings in an estimated $72 million in annual revenue, according to SNL Kagan. More than half of that is profit.

Costs are low. The company doesn't spend much on programming because VH1 Classic showcases content from the MTV and VH1 vault, along with documentaries and old movies. VH1 Classic, and other tiny networks, can be managed by a skeleton staff with as few as 10 to 15 employees, according to one knowledgeable insider.

But ratings are minuscule. VH1 Classic doesn't rank in the Top 100 television networks as measured by Nielsen.

Viacom isn't the only company with also-ran networks. NBCUniversal has Esquire, Chiller, Oxygen and Sprout. Fox has such spin-offs as Nat Geo Wild and FXX. Discovery has American Heroes Channel and Velocity.

Time Warner, which has fewer channels, responded by offering HBO as a stand-alone streaming service. It also loaded up on sports rights to make TBS and TNT must-have channels.

Viacom contends that expensive sports networks are driving up package prices — and that dropping a few channels won't solve the problem.

ESPN, for example, is sold for more than $6 a month per subscriber home, and in Southern California, SportsNet LA, which is owned by the Los Angeles Dodgers, is offered for an estimated $4.90 a month per subscriber home.

In contrast, most general entertainment channels are licensed for 10 cents to 50 cents a month per subscriber home, according to SNL Kagan.

"So long as the operators carry a broad array of sports networks, the cost of the TV package will remain high," said Denise Denson, executive vice president for content distribution at Viacom Media Networks.

Going lean

Pay-TV companies recognize that they have to slim down the packages to keep customers who are increasingly consuming entertainment on mobile phones, tablets, laptops and game consoles. They have begun introducing "skinny" bundles, often offered in conjunction with a high-speed Internet subscription.

Analysts estimate that 2 million to 3 million TV homes — or about 2% to 3% of the total — have reduced the number of channels they receive or cut the cord entirely since 2012.

Dish Network this year launched Sling TV, an Internet streaming service that bypasses the company's bread-and-butter delivery method of a satellite dish. Sling TV is aimed at the "cord-nevers" — the apartment dwellers, singles and young families who are interested in receiving only a few channels, including sports.

For $20-a-month, Sling's "Best of Live TV" package includes Disney Channel, ESPN, ESPN2, Food Network, Cartoon Network and CNN. Customers can add HBO for an extra $15 a month and other add-on combinations. But Sling does not carry broadcast networks, including ABC and CBS, and it lacks some favorites, including Fox News Channel and Bravo.

Verizon's skinny plan starts at $54.99 a month, a higher price tag because it includes the broadcast networks and more than a dozen cable channels. Subscribers can add additional "channel packs" for an extra $10 a month.

Tacking on several "channel packs" can quickly add up to roughly the same cost as a basic cable subscription, analysts have noted.

Verizon also is facing push-back. ESPN sued, contending its agreement prohibits Verizon from offering its channels in such a manner. Verizon disagrees.

Andy Albert, senior vice president of content acquisition for Cox Communications, which provides cable service on the Palos Verdes Peninsula and Orange County, said skinny bundles are a work in progress — and they might not satisfy most customers.

"In many ways, skinny bundles are still a myth," Albert said. "The companies that advertise them are offering pretty fat bundles, and in some instances, they have omitted entire families of channels.... If you were to sit down and pick out all the channels that you wanted, and put them into some Franken-bundle, it would still add up to a pretty big number."

RBC Capital Markets analyst David Bank ran the numbers and found the savings were not substantial. Consumers would save only about $29 a month by dropping traditional pay-TV and keeping a high-speed Internet service and a couple of streaming services, Bank said in a recent report.

There will likely be more carnage.

Independently owned channels — a group that includes Reelz Channel, arts channel Ovation, Outside TV, Fuse and AXS TV — could be vulnerable, analysts say. They lack the leverage of a big media company in contract negotiations — and thus might be easier for distributors to eliminate.

"There will be clear winners and losers," said Bill Abbott, chief executive of the independent Crown Media Holdings, which owns the popular Hallmark Channel that is offered at a discount to some lower-rated channels. "We think we will continue to be a very attractive option," Abbott said.

Todd Juenger, media analyst for Bernstein Research, has been monitoring the cord-cutting trend for several years. He said vestiges of the current system likely will linger.

"I think the pay-TV model is going to be like the land-line phone," Juenger said. "While there has been steady erosion in the use of land lines, they have stuck around longer than most of us thought."
