Why did you choose this?

- Picked up screw in rear tire. These are OEM for my bike. Only 900 miles on tire but didn't want to chance having tire plugged.

These were OEM on my Triumph T120. Got 15500k out of them. Others recommended going to a different brand. But stuck to my guns as the bike was a good setup with these. Only issue is that took 2mths for local Dealer to get them in?? By then there was a fine outline of the tread pattern left..Lol

Excellent long lasting tires.

15,000+ miles on first set when I traded bike in. They have excellent handling, even wear, no problems whatsoever. Didn't hesitate to buy again when I picked up screw in rear tire.

Great tires. It feels like the tires in the bike were designed to work together.

I really did enjoy these tires, I never felt like I needed any more grip. I was able to get 11,000 miles out of the front and rear, which in my world was excellent. I bought these tires because they were the OE replacement and seemed to work well with the bike, handling, and suspension.

5 Stars Hands Down !!

Best part of the order was the sales person's knowledge to drop ship my tire within a day to my floor step. Can't believe that 71 called most of the Ducati dealers in my area & everyone gave me the 4-5 days to get the tire. This sales guy just broke all records by getting this tire 1 Round More.

 Right on Andy. Exactly my thoughts the first time I flew mine in 2S 450 packs. I was immediately impressed. I hear a lot of winners on the forums and social media sites about weight how this type of quad is a waste of money..... when these folks don't even own, nor have flown this model. Well it's great in my book and those other folks blinded by ignorance and inexperience will just need to live life without all the fun this one provides. Cheers my friend.

Phantom Sentinel, the new invisible, boomerang-like UAV

E Cyrus Farivar 09.30.06

f t yd +

This whole "war on terror" thing sometimes reminds us a bit of that comic "Spy vs. Spy" -- each time we turn around, another company comes out with a way to ratchet espionage tech up a notch. We thought that the Lethal Frisbee UAV was cool, but we just found something that might in fact be a bit sweeter. Meet the "Phantom Sentinel," the latest from VeraTech Aero in Minnesota, which is a boomerang-like device for spying on our crafty foes on the other side. Apparently, as the UAV rotates it becomes nearly invisible in the sky while its cam takes quick snapshots of the scene below, then transmits them back to a soldier on the ground. We're assuming that those crazy goggles the other G.I. is wearing in this photo are able to translate that dizzying number of spinning images to something that a human brain can make sense of.

Most helpful positive review

I bought the for my 5 year old son. It was a bad purchase for his age because he is so hard on everything. The age recommendation is 14 years old for this particular problem. Needless to say my 11 year old plays with it more and it is holding up fine. I love it and I low key want one for myself in pink tho..

Fun to use with the granddids. My only difficulty with it is the charging of the helicopter. The cable for the usb charger is very touchy when connected to the helicopter. It takes some fiddling to make it stay charging.

I ordered this item for my great-grandson who had told me earlier what he would spend money for. It came four days ahead of the date I was notified it would be here, and I really appreciated that. I won't know until after Christmas how well it works.

FAA, "No Changes for Part 103 Ultralights"

BY DAN JOHNSON | SEPTEMBER 30, 2007 | LEAVE A COMMENT

If you fly a two-seat ultralight, I hope you're aware of a big change just ahead: the January 31, 2008 deadline when you must transition such aircraft to Experimental LSA. Some have acted already. Many have not. FAA says that date is firm and will not change.  But outgoing FAA Administrator Marion Blakey also said "No change to Part 103." Called "Ultralight Vehicles" (not "aircraft"), this distinction now means something special. The Part 103 rule for single seaters rather quietly counted its 25th birthday in September 2007. This low-key event also celebrates aviation's simplest rule — the entire FAR can be printed on a single sheet of paper...and it is still alive and well.  Examples like the Phantom ultralight have excellent flight characteristics and low prices. In late 2007, a Phantom X-1 kit is less than $15,000 and you can legally pay someone to build it for you.

Phantom Aircraft — Phantom X1-E

BY DAN JOHNSON | MARCH 30, 2004 | LEAVE A COMMENT

While Phantoms have always been a source of satisfaction to its owners the design has suffered through numerous owners...but not any more! These days Phantom Aircraft, based in Kalamazoo, Michigan is operated by Pat Schulties who lends his steady hand to the long established brand. Dating to the beginning of the ultralight movement in the early 1980s the new X1-E model also advances the design into the new millennium. In those young days of ultralight flying Phantom was considered a high performing aircraft with snappy handling. Today such a description may fit other brands but Phantom hasn't lost its edge. For those that may be hesitant about building their own aircraft Phantom may set you at ease. Formally a teacher, Schulties had his entire school participate in building the now famous "Child's Play" Phantom. In the end 130 kids had actually worked on building this ultralight and while they did a better job than I could, you should be able to meet the challenge.

Phantom ultralights continue to charm many pilots The proposed sport pilot and light-sport aircraft rule changes have been the focus of much discussion and anticipation over the last several months, and good reasons for such unbridled attention are plentiful. Under the proposed rule, you can obtain an FAA sport pilot certificate in as little as 20 hours and then carry a passenger without having to become a flight instructor. Many interesting aircraft will become available for purchase either as kits or ready-to-fly light-sport aircraft (LSA), and these machines will be more "capable" in that they will be faster, better equipped, more comfortable, and more closely resemble conventional aircraft. In many ways, they will outperform the general aviation aircraft

the nation's largest seller of Light-Sport Aircraft, focused on the CTLS and CT Super, the top-selling LSA in America. Airtime has represented Flight Design CT aerobics since Day One and knows more about the model than anyone outside the manufacturer. Run by a father and son team, Tom and Tom Gutmann Sr. and Jr. are enthusiasts that can get you in the aircraft you want and can help you maintain, upgrade or enjoy your aircraft.

Texas Aircraft, from the Lone Star state, offers a bright new entry: Colt 100, a descendant from an established Brazilian light aircraft. Colt is a handsome, clean-sheet design built of aluminum with a steel tail, cell structure, performing sprightly with its Rotax 912 engine and showing a well-equipped, modern, deluxe interior that any pilot can love.

SportairUSA is a pioneering LSA distributor featuring the top-performing, STOL, the Savage Normal Shock Ultra and 2-Float amphibious floats for light aircraft. It is a full-line, mid-America operation providing LSA & Part 23 airframe, engine & prop maintenance, repair and avionics.

Phantom

BY DAN JOHNSON | JANUARY 10, 2004 — 2 COMMENTS

Thousands of other Phantom ultralights are flying, but the one I was about to fly was built by a bunch of kids. Although they were no doubt serious and focused during the building effort, the Phantom X-1 was named Child's Play. Had I lost my mind? "So, you're really going to fly that ultralight built by a bunch of elementary school kids, huh?" The question was more than small talk. The prospect actually worried some observers. "Of course," I replied. "The kids probably did a better job than I could." I'm no builder, a fact I often repeat. After flying airplanes built by all kinds of pilots, I didn't see the jeopardy in flying the product of students at the Haverhill Elementary School in Portage, Michigan. I admit I looked over the Phantom carefully, but I found no flaws. Besides, long-time Phantom pilot and Phantom Aircraft Company president Pat Schultheis had already test-flown it and put hours on it.

Phantom X-1E

BY DAN JOHNSON | JANUARY 10, 2004 — LEAVE A COMMENT

What would you do if you produced one of the best known and best loved classic ultralights in the world? If your name is Pat Schultheis and your brand is Phantom, you probably wouldn't mess with success. Known simply as Phantom to most folks, the proper name is actually the Phantom X-1. Even this model has gone through refinements over the years. And some builders have further varied the theme; one Phantom I flew had been converted to a taildragger - it was a blast. A 2-seat Phantom model was tried years ago and newer efforts are underway at this time. The first effort, under the direction of then-Phantom company owner Jack Taylor, flopped so badly that after a short, challenging flight in the machine, I gave it back to the factory and told them I couldn't report on it yet; it simply wasn't right and shouldn't be sold to customers.

Tecnam is the world's leading manufacturer of Light-Sport aircraft offering more models and variations than any other producer. Besides the world's fastest-selling light twin and their new P2010 four seater, Tecnam offers these LSA: P-301, Eagle, Airone, and P2008.

Vickers Aircraft has created one of the most distinctive new LSA airplanes yet to emerge. Powered by the 180-horsepower Titan TD-340TC by Continental Motors, their Wave model is like no other seaplane ever introduced with multiple features to set it apart from the crowd.

AeroJones Aviation builds the very popular CJ-series of Light-Sport Aircraft for Asia-Pacific markets. CJ45 is the latest version... a 26% carbon fiber design with superb performance, roomy cockpit, great useful load, and a parachute as standard equipment.

Kob Aircraft is one of the most famous and successful names in light aviation. From the two-place Mark III to the four-place 103 Ultralight Flyer, Kob has some of the most charming and best flying aircraft you can afford.

Progressive Aerodyne designed and supplies the Stealth series... arguably the most celebrated of all light seaplanes in America. A close community of hundreds of owners offers camaraderie few other brands can match.

BRM Aero manufactures the handsome Bristol all-metal SLB. This highly evolved next-generation LightSport was carefully engineered for luxury, comfort, excellent stability, and safety while being fun, fast, and easy to fly.

Evolution Trikes developed and continues to refine their Revo an absolutely magnificent weight shift control aircraft (or trike). Revo is their new very affordable single place machine.

Aerotrek Aircraft imports the A240 and A220 tricycle gear or taildragger Special Light-Sport Aircraft. A finely finished aircraft at an excellent price, Aerotrek has wide, affordable appeal.

Aeroplant USA ends your search for a Light Sport Aircraft that is both familiar and new. Consider L500. This 80-horsepower copy of Cessna's 182 is built with modern materials and well equipped but for tiny fraction of the cost of a new Skyline.

Aero Adventure offers what is likely the lowest cost boat-hull seaplane in the light aircraft space with a bit that, complete with engine, sells for less than $30,000. Add a long history to its credit and Adventure is a seaplane worthy of a close look.

Evektor is Number One and always will be. The Czech company's Sportstar was the number one SLB to win approval but engineers have already improved the model far beyond the 2005 version that started the race.

aircraft (locally) and now this fine-flying, all-metal beauty is available in the United States as a Special Light-Sport Aircraft. Here is an LSA to follow:

Aerolite 103 is a remarkably well priced (way below $20,000), well equipped, Part 103 ultralight that flies beautifully. Several hundred are airborne and production has never been more solid. Here is an airplane every pilot can love and afford!

Arion Aircraft has designed and built one of the most beautiful low wing entries in the Special LSA and kit-built aircraft sector. The all-American designed and built aircraft is priced fairly and flies wonderfully... need you search for more?

Bristell USA distributes the highly-refined Bristell aircraft in North America. The Czech-built aircraft is a 2nd generation design with excellent performance, wonderful handling, and a most appealing shape. Other airplanes may look similar but Bristell has gone far beyond.

North Wing is America's leading manufacturer of lightweight LSA and Part 103 ultralights. The company's wing designs are so good that most other like manufacturers use them. Aircraft prices are highly affordable by all.

Lockwood Aircraft is the builder of top of light aviation best recognized flying machines: AirCam and the Drifter line. Most sport aviators already know the Lockwood brand, a leader in Rotax maintenance and aircraft services.

Seamax Aircraft designed and manufactures a wonderful Light-Sport amphibious flying boat of the same name. Created in Brazil Seamax is a beautifully finished, high performing aircraft, the first to win FAA acceptance as a LSA and it sets a high standard for light floatplanes.

The price includes our patent Phantom double holder and new style telescopic case.

I've mentioned many times my attraction to really unusual and historically interesting wood and brass cameras ... and Anthony's Phantom Camera doesn't disappoint. E. & H.T. Anthony was one of America's earliest camera companies and created some of the most distinctive looking equipment ever seen.

Introduced at the 1888 Photographer's Association of America Convention in Minneapolis, Minnesota, the Phantom was offered until 1894. It was designed along the lines of very portable, lightweight English Compact cameras.

The fully reversible back and bellows turned together for landscape or portrait picture taking. The original patent for this design was granted on February 10, 1882 stating:

“The invention consists in so attaching a bellows to the front part of the camera as to allow the bellows to turn or revolve, where by only the rear part of the camera needs to be loosened to change the position from vertical to horizontal or vice versa without altering the position of the front part of the camera, to which the lens is attached.”

This example is Serial No.74, a 6½" x 8½" format model. Anthony's 1891 Catalogue For Amateurs lists this camera for $38; about $1,011 in year 2015 dollars. Also shown with the camera is Anthony's Universal View Finder, which could be attached to any camera in landscape and portrait orientations.

Anthony cameras are highly prized by many collectors because of the company's historical legacy and inherently odd looking designs. A compact folding design, polished mahogany and liberal use of brass hardware gives the Phantom a look that is unique even among Anthony cameras.

Boeing Phantom Badger

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The Boeing Phantom Badger, or simply the Badger, is a combat support vehicle built by Boeing, in collaboration with MSI Defense Solutions.^[2] Designed in response to transport issues with the V-22 Osprey, the Badger is notable for its size and versatility.^[3] Unlike previous vehicles and competing offers, the Badger's design is such that it avoids non-standard equipment, instead using already available hardware for construction.^[4] Although officially certified for use with United States Navy aircraft, the Badger is also used by the United States Air Force as well as United States Marine Corps special operations.

Design [edit]

The Badger seats 2, with a rear designed to be configured based upon its mission requirements.

ABOUT PHANTOM BIKES

Early summer of 2009 I had an idea. Taking a beach cruiser bicycle and mounting an engine in it. Searching the internet to find things that I would need, I noticed that this was not a new idea at all. I saw what was out there and said, "I can build a better bike." Asking a friend to help me with this project we got started searching for parts. Buying two bicycles from local sport stores and ordering engine kits online, we slowly gathered the things we needed.

Case-Mate Phantom Case for iPhone 4/S Review

/FEATURED

Phantom, the name sounds menacingly good. It also happens to be the name of Case-Mate's latest rugged case made for the iPhone 4 and iPhone 4S. The Phantom case can be thought of as the trendier replacement to Case-Mate's Tough and Tank rugged cases. With so many different types of cases and brands to choose from, the Phantom manages to put on a spectacular that has set it apart from all the tough and rugged types. Jump past the break to find out if dropping $50 of your hard earned scratch on the Phantom is worthwhile!

The Phantom isn't the most affordable case at $50, just $10 under Case-Mate's arguably ugly duckling Tank case. While you won't be seeing the Phantom case in this exact paint job, it does come in a favorable selection of five different color tones all of which will suit the female crowd perfectly. Between us guys, the black and white Phantom is mainly looking enough to be rocked out on your iPhone even though I'd call it unisex.

'TIS THE SEASON FOR FOOD WE LOVE.

At first glance, the Phantom looks like your ordinary silicone case. But it only looks that way because of how well it's designed. Underneath, the Phantom is a two-piece case made up from two layers of what Case-Mate calls DuoFlex and PolyCare materials. The first layer is a snap-on frame that is an opposite of a back snap-on style case you'd be using if protection was the least of your worries. That then snaps onto the front of the iPhone, adding a layer of front protection with embedded molded rubber which will keep your screen extra safe in case you were to drop your iPhone front face down on pavement. Right about now is a good idea to put on the included screen protector. Note that glass screen protectors such as the Glas 1 and thick skins will not fit with the Phantom case.

The second layer is what you would call the pièce de résistance. That's French for saying the best part of all in case you were wondering. The case itself is co-molded out of what Case-Mate calls revolutionary materials, DuoFlex and PolyCare. In reality that sounds and feels all too much like silicone rubber and polycarbonate plastic without the fancy name calling with all due respect. Nonetheless, Case-Mate's brilliant construction work has paid off. The Phantom is seamless and feels like a high quality case. And for $50, I'd expect no less.

The mixture of hard and soft is always a winning combination when it comes to protective cases. The Phantom's co-molded body DuoFlex exterior feels smooth to the touch with plenty of grip thanks to the silicone rubber finish and added micro-texture gripping all around the perimeter. You know your case can absorb shock and impact well when you set your iPhone on a table and you hear that thump sound coming from the silicone rubber. That purple color protruding thru the gray DuoFlex is the hard polycarbonate layer, or PolyCare for short, and it also covers the interior of the Phantom creating a hard shell cocoon. Because of that, the Phantom is a very rigid case with little give despite the mixture of materials. Lint and dust won't attract onto the case.

Getting your iPhone 4S into the case is slightly daunting at first, though not as hard as you would think. Even while the Phantom is a relatively rigid case, there's just enough flex for you to slide in your iPhone with the front frame already attached buttons side first.

You're then left with an amazingly tight fitting case with an impressive amount of protection from every angle imaginable. Look, even the ports and buttons are all sealed and covered up with the Phantom's built-in port covers. The extra large back facing camera cutout sadly is too recessed and will cause white washed-out photos if you're firing off the LED flash in low light conditions. Those extra large cutouts also extend to the port covers which all allow larger than normal 3.5mm headphone plugs and charging cables. As for all of the covered and protected buttons including the home button, each remain easy to press with great amount of tactile responsiveness.

Case-Mate has proven it has a great deal of experience thinking thru just about every single aspect with the Phantom case. It's worth mentioning that the built-in port covers are cut more narrower than expected and create visible gaps. It isn't clear why Case-Mate designed these covers as such.

With great drop protection comes a great deal of bulk. That's to be expected. Now although the Phantom will bulk up your iPhone, it isn't as apparent as other tough cases such as the Griffin Survivor case. Duly because of the Phantom's sleek and contoured shape.

With everything considered, the Phantom is one fantastic protective case to be using. It has all the right style other tough cases couldn't possibly pull off whilst feeling superb to handle and use as an everyday case. The Phantom is the most rugged case you'll come across that's stylish and aesthetically pleasing. And because of that, it'll appeal mostly to women looking for a tough protective case that looks better than it claims to be. Let's face it guys, we can't keep all the good looking tough cases to ourselves. You'll find most if not all of Case-Mate's color selection to be off putting.

For nearly 20 years the U.S. Air Force operated QF-4 Phantom supersonic jet fighters as target drones over Gulf of Mexico ranges near Tyndall AFB, Florida. The last of the Tyndall QF-4s departed for Holloman AFB, New Mexico, on 24 July 2015. It has since retired from service. These scenes depict spectacular QF-4 shoot-downs, drone operations, and the final send-off of a Tyndall QF-4 by the 82nd Aerial Target Squadron. Lt. Col. Todd Houchins, 53rd Test Support Squadron commander, flew the QF-4 cross-country to Holloman on 24 July 2015. Have you subscribed to the Airailimages Channel on YouTube? The Boomerang Drone

By CLIVE THOMPSON DEC. 10, 2016

THE BOOMERANG DRONE. 1 The Phantom Sentinel is essentially just blades, making it all but invisible. 2 Cameras near the craft's center capture a 360-degree panorama. 3 Live video is broadcast to the drone's operators. Illustration by +ISM

When the Phantom Sentinel takes flight, it looks like an awkward boomerang — a set of three small blades. It spins in a circle, faster and faster as it ascends into the sky. Then, when it reaches about 50 feet, it whirls so fast that something remarkable happens: it vanishes right before your very eyes.

The Sentinel is still there, but you can't see it. It is the world's first "invisible spy drone," a new class of remote-controlled stealth aircraft. Driven by electric-engine propellers on two of its blades, the Sentinel also moves in virtual silence. "You could fly it 75 feet above the Macy's parade, and nobody would know it was there at all," says Dean Tangren, president of VeraTech Aero Corporation, which received a patent for the invention this summer.

The Phantom Sentinel works by putting the difficulty we have in perceiving rapidly spinning objects to use. Think of a helicopter: the body is immobile and thus visible, but the blades are moving so fast that the eye sees them as only a vague blur. Tangren's device works like a helicopter, except that the whole craft is nothing but the blades. Meanwhile, cameras mounted near the center of the Sentinel whirl in circular patterns, capturing a 360-degree panorama and broadcasting live video to the operators. A Sentinel can be folded up into a backpack and can fly for up to 40 minutes before its batteries need refueling.

Military agencies have already contacted Tangren about using the Sentinel for spy surveillance. So have private-sector firms, including an oil company that envisioned using Phantom Sentinels to patrol its 5,000 miles of oil pipelines. If Osama bin Laden is ever caught by one of these drones, it would be a scene straight out of science fiction: the world's most reclusive terrorist, nabbed by a pair of invisible eyes.

The aircraft departed from Sandown Airport, Isle of Wight, on a planned flight to Defford Airfield. After climbing to an altitude of 1,900 ft, the engine failed. The pilot made a successful forced landing in a grass field approximately 2 nm southeast of Newport, Isle of Wight, but during the landing roll the aircraft encountered uneven ground that was obscured by long grass and the aircraft sustained damage to the nosewheel and left mainwheel. The pilot was uninjured. He reported that during the post-flight examination of the engine, fuel was present in the fuel tank and the carburetor float bowl but when the spark plugs were removed, the rear plug was found soaked with unburned fuel. This indicated a failure of the rear cylinder's ignition system.

- Question: Sixthreezero weight restrictions
Answer: Considering factors that impact how much weight a bicycle can withstand include the type of riding, proper assembly, bicycle maintenance, and tire inflation. It's most important to make sure the bike is properly assembled, maintained regularly and that tire pressure is checked as often as bike is ridden. Thanks

Nice bike but poor quality control

March 28, 2019

Style: 19.5-inch Frame | Verified Purchase

Bike is easy to assemble, just make sure you have metric hex wrenches, and rides well. Nice looking. Seat is very uncomfortable.

4 stars

1 star off from this for poor quality control:

Rear innertube was defective and wouldn't hold air. Not pinched nor punctured. Rather than patch a tube known to be defective, I ordered a new one from Amazon.

The push rod in the Shimano 3-speed rear hub was missing so it wouldn't shift. Called customer support, the woman was competent and helpful but they have to ship an entire new rear wheel assembly because they don't have individual parts. This will take at least 6 weeks. I fashioned a new push rod from a long-handled hex wrench as a temporary fix. This morning I ordered a new pushrod from Amazon for $7.99.

Schwinn Phantom Urban 3 Speed Cruiser

May 30, 2018

Style: 18-inch Frame | Vine Customer Review of Free Product (What's this?)

My 15 year old grew something like six inches over the winter. The first time he pulled his bike out of the garage this spring, he was shocked at how small it now is for him. I got the Schwinn Phantom Urban 3 Speed Cruiser for him and he is very happy with it. I really like the simple, sleek look of the bike, it's light enough to be easy to manage when using a bike rack.

Removing the bike from the box and unwrapping all of the foam, plastic, and cardboard took a few minutes. You will need scissors to cut through several plastic bands holding the bicycle parts in place. To assemble the bike, you will need a philips head screwdriver (to tighten the reflective piece on the handlebar and literally nothing else), three or four different sizes of allen wrenches, pliers, and a large dose of patience. My son helped me with the assembly and it was definitely easier to have a second pair of hands.

The parts of the bike you need to install are the handlebars, the seat, and the pedals. It should be simple, but anything that has to be put together with the most diabolical tool ever created (the allen wrench) is never simple. It doesn't help that the directions are written as if the handlebar post isn't already installed. Instead, the first step really was to attach the handlebars to the post. After dropping the allen wrench 3-4 times, back to the second tool -> Read more Expensive but it is a nice casual bike.

March 26, 2019

Style: 18-inch Frame | Vine Customer Review of Free Product (What's this?)

This arrives in a big brown box, and comes mostly assembled. You have to put it together yourself, but it's super easy, even without instructions. I opened it up and got rid of all the packaging. I opened the enormous manual, which was zero help. The instructions inside aren't for this bike, but are meant for ALL Schwinn bikes they make. I gave up using it and just put it together on my own.

There isn't too much to do, which was a plus. You don't need many tools, either. The pedals screw on. The back tire and chain are already assembled, which was awesome. The brakes are like disc brakes so there's no brake pads or wires to mess with. The front tire clips on and you screw it down, too. The handlebars were the most challenging because the instructions didn't specify how they were meant to go on - what angle, etc. I just guess and I guessed right - seems to work. The only wire to worry about is for the shifter and I was worried where it went - around the front or back or under - whatever. I guessed again and it's good - works fine. Seat slides into place and screws down too. It's a pretty nice bike. Big fat light yellow tires and jet black tubing looks sweet - minimalist and clean. It rides nice and feels good.

It's pricey! I mean, I got my other bike at a yard sale for $20 and it's a new mountain bike with like 20 speeds or something. I don't know that people buy NEW bikes anymore because I see them for sale all the time at yard sales. Not this kind - this is a 3 speed casual bike. With style. But still, $300 bucks is kind of a lot! But, it does look cool!

Question: How far can i fly this thing away from the remote? (What is the range)
Answer: Assuming you have no local interference you might get close to 300 feet with this but I doubt it. The frequency has very little forgiveness and the video feed will drop off long before you reach the max range. Also note, if you do hit the max range and exceed itit'll just keep going and you'll be hunting for it in no time.

The first one I got broke before I had a chance to fly it. The battery lead came off the control board. Sent it back... bought another one and it was uncontrollable. Broke two blades trying to sort out issue. Called World Tech Toys the maker of them for help and I would say they have the worst customer service ever!! After numerous attempts to actually get to an actual person I was able to resolve the issue. To do a recal of the system you need to hold each control stick down and inward until the lights quit flashing..which is know where in the instructions..and on top of that they do not have any blades available to purchase. I was told to go the there sister company Hobby Troy which I did. I ordered a set of replacement blades and of course they sent the wrong ones. I emailed them to get an rma number to exchange them and I have not heard from them in two weeks.. So as far as the drone goes once you sort out all the issues it does fly pretty well. Every flight you have to adjust the trim to stabilize the drone. The camera totally sucks. I bought a Polaroid PL 300 Drone for about 10 dollars more and it is Amazing! Camera excellent,and it easy to fly right out of the box.

Howard was extremely helpful! I wanted a new sound system in my car but really didn't know exactly what I needed, he talked me through everything and made suggestions based on my taste and budget. After we picked everything out and scheduled a date he was still available on the phone to answer my questions about last minute changes. I could not be happier with the job they did on the installation and the sound of everything, they definitely went above and beyond mounting my sub-woofers and amps!

Look no further if you are on the fence, these guys are all around pros.

Phantom electronics exceeded my expectations. Everyone there is helpful and knowledgeable. Very respectful and kind. I grew up in a garage with my dad with wet-sanding cars and I know the guys that work on cars take their job seriously. As soon as I walked into this business I knew I was in good hands. They couldn't have been nicer to me. They showed me the information on installing a new navigations system and with that, all the perks of siriusXM, podcasts, music navigation—the works as my 2014 Mercedes Benz had an ANCIENT system in it...SO outdated and awful. I had to have my waze! I drive all over California working on film sets. I HAVE to rely on a navigation system every day when we drive to new locations all over the State. Within a few minutes I was able to pick out the technology that they would be putting in my car. Their customer service is great and I really appreciated the time the tech took with me explaining everything. no condescending attitudes here just friendly, kind, funny and HONEST men who took great care of me. They reminded me of my dad, a man who always cared about cars and the people who drove them. Also, the owner Sat with me for 30 minutes i my car, showing me everything about my newly installed tech. I have Pandora, podcasts, Waze, Spotify, SiriusXM, Google maps, Spotify & iHeartRadio. I am SET! YES! I am so so happy! SUPER Big thanks to everyone there for being so patient and kind and for giving me my music back again in my car. Also, one more thing, I had bought a Mercedes with a weird ashtray and no charger...I didnt want to keep it that way, so I asked around to see if there were any "compartments" that didn't have an ashtray (that had been used) I was able to replace it with a new, compartment...without an ash tray- and the guys at Phantom Electronics were able to make it work and I got a charger in it! I mean...they are the bomb. I felt so happy to find them and I know if I ewer need anything, these guys are my first call. They are the best and I would recommend them to anyone!

PARKING SENSOR SERVICE

Thank you so much Howard and team for your excellent service on my Mercedes C250.

Everyone here is very kind and helpful.

My previous vehicle was rear ended and totaled. My new one didn't have the parking sensors I had loved on my original car. Howard and team installed sensors on my new car and he made the process incredibly simple.

What to expect from this business:

PROFESSIONALISM: he knows how to treat his customers well right from the start

EFFICIENCY: Howard covered all the bases and kept his word. He made this super easy and guided me through the entire process of completing the work on my car.

RESPECTFUL: I am not the most knowledgeable with car stuff and so my dad came along with me. Howard spoke to both of us and explained everything to me and my dad. I appreciated that because even though I'm paying for the service, my experience with others in the past was that I was not acknowledged. Being female I have noticed that women seem to be disregarded when they are unfamiliar with certain trades. This was not the case at all! Howard shook my hand and treated me the same as my dad. He was very kind and made sure I understood all the details. That meant so much to me!

TRUSTWORTHY: I felt extremely confident in leaving my vehicle in their hands. You will see just from meeting this business owner that you can trust him.

KNOWLEDGEABLE: This business offers many services at which Howard has extensive knowledge. I was happy to learn how the installation process worked at the initial meeting.

RELIABLE: Excellent communication skills. He did what he said he was going to do. Everything was done in a timely manner.

Thanks again for making the sensor installation easy on me! Your service provided was great and I will highly recommend you to others.

I took my Jeep wrangler in because my stereo had been intermittently loosing power. Howard said he thought he knew what the issue was, an interface module. Which he replaced. Much to my dismay the following day the issue returned. So I brought my Jeep back in a second time. Howard discovered a recall issue on my Jeep where the fuses in the fuse box may become loose over time. Howard put a tiny bit of solder on the legs of the fuse (even did a second fuse for a backup). When I asked him how much I owed him for the second visit he said no charge. I said I had to pay something because they spent time on it. He said, and I quote, "if in a couple months I haven't had any issues and I'm feeling flushed with money I can come back in and pay" It has actually been at least a month with no more issues, so I'll be back, haha

5/28/2020 • Updated review

Had another great experience at Phantom Electronics. This time I had an air horn installed. The best part, however, was that Howard (the owner) was willing to go above and beyond to accommodate me by installing a couple of aftermarket grilles while the bumper was off. This saved a lot of time and the hassle it would have taken to do it myself.

There's a reason Phantom Electronics has not one review less than 5-star, obviously they are doing something right and they take care of the customer.

Bought a used truck with a Gerry-rigged radio. Went on the fritz so much I justified getting it replaced even though the truck cost $7k. Howard showed me my options and even though I thought I would shop around the customer service was so good I forewent any competitors. Took my dogs for a run and came back early and he was graciously welcoming to two young ACDs not comfortable with anyone besides me and my alpha female. As we waited I saw them fix so much of the duct tape and bubble gum system that existed and moreso, he was out of the base model we agreed on so he installed the next higher model at no extra charge. I am so happy with my new truck radio and product + install cost less than $350. Can't wait to come back here to put a dash cam into my new BMW. Great people, great prices, great service. Total gem.

The folks at Phantom Electronics are great! I was looking for a reliable place to install an after market radio. Howard is the best... very knowledgeable and warm. He walks you through the process of selecting the equipment needed and gives you all available options on choice of equipment, install options, and makes you feel at ease. Dropped off my car and within 6 hours had it back with the new radio. The installation was very clean and they took the time to clean the

The installation was top notch and they repaired some of the interior of the car as well. Very satisfied with Howard and the guys at Phantom Electronics!

The process went so well that I have my family coming in within the next month to do other stuff with their cars!

Thanks Howard and team!

Last week Phantom Electronics installed a new radio in my Yukon XL. Chris Rusk was extremely busy that day, with Howard out of town, but he couldn't have been more patient and professional with the many walk-ins. A problem was diagnosed in my speakers, which they remedied today. An hour-an-a-half later, after rewiring my speakers, Chris patiently explained the new radio, answered my foolish questions, and even programmed all the stations. Again, very patient with this old lady. When I offered my credit card for the speaker repair, he stated, "Oh no, we worked on your speakers before (more than 10 years ago), and it is under warranty." Now that is service! Thank you, Chris! I am very pleased with the service at Phantom Electronics.

I've been a long time customer of phantom since they were across the street, late 80s? Back then I got great service also, especially from a big gentleman wearing a doctors surgical green shirt, he actually knew alot about the radio business, and the installation process and he was highly knowledgeable about the cars he worked on and did my stereo install very professionally, paid attention to detail etc.. Fast forward to today... I returned and they again did the installation, very professional, much attention to detail, no big guy in greens, but a well oiled team of employees, working in unison, to offer the finest quality customer service one business could offer!

Still great!

Brought in my Grand Marquis for a component front speaker setup that sounds just like I was looking for, nice and clear with a good front sound stage that the muddy knee level 3way speakers already in it just couldn't do. Howard grabbed the perfect speakers for me before I was even done telling him what I was looking for! Didn't try to up-sell or pressure into anything I didn't need. Even on a busy day they had the whole thing done and ready to go in about an hour.

I'll likely come back for a subwoofer install at some point in the future!

We drove an all-new $644,000 Rolls-Royce Phantom that's the pinnacle of automotive luxury. Here are its coolest features.

Review

- The Rolls-Royce introduced an all-new eighth generation Phantom for 2018.
- The new Rolls-Royce flagship is powered by a 563 horsepower, twin-turbo V12.
- It starts at $450,000 while our extended wheelbase test car carried a price tag of nearly $644,000.
- The Phantom is fully-customizable and loaded with cool tech and luxury features.

Over the years, Rolls-Royce has become a byword for automotive opulence. As the pinnacle of road going luxury, the Phantom is Rolls-Royce's long-serving flagship. For the first time in 15 years, there's an all-new generation Phantom. In fact, it's the eighth generation in the nameplate that dates back to 1925.

Earlier this year, Business Insider was able to spend an afternoon with the all-new Phantom, including about an hour behind the wheel of the behemoth.

The Rolls-Royce Phantom will be available in two body styles, the stand wheelbase and the extended wheelbase which adds eight extra inches in length. In case you're wondering, the extended wheelbase Phantom is 19.5 feet long.

Read more: We drove the all-new $644,000 Rolls-Royce Phantom and were blown away by its opulence. Take a look inside.

Under the hood is a new 563 horsepower, 6.75 liter, twin-turbocharged V12 engine. According to Rolls, our extra-long Phantom can hit 60 mph in just 5.2 seconds. The standard Phantom is about 0.2 seconds faster. Both versions have a top speed of 155 mph.

We were impressed by the new Phantom driving dynamics thanks to its new four-wheel-steering system. It's not exactly nimble, but far more fleet of foot than you would expect from a vehicle of its size. However, the real place to be is in the back where you can stretch out and get a feel for the serenity and smoothness of its passenger experience. It's what Rolls-Royce calls the "magic carpet ride."

The standard wheelbase Phantom starts at about $450,000. But our test car is an extended wheelbase model that is eight inches longer than the standard Phantom and starts at $530,000. With bespoke optional extras, our black-and-emerald-green Roller costs nearly $644,000.

Here's a closer look at the coolest tech and luxury features on the Rolls-Royce Phantom:

We have the chance to experience the Phantom on the streets of New York City.

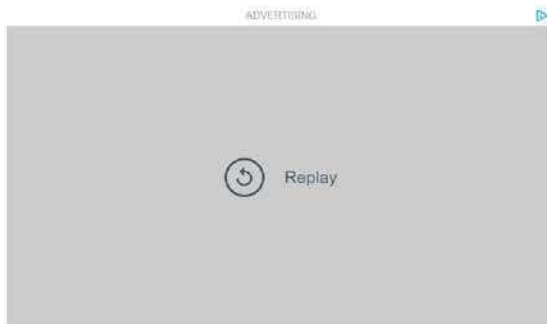

Benjamin Zhang/Business Insider

Behind the wheel, the first thing you notice is the heads-up display and a digital instrument cluster designed to mimic old-school Rolls-Royce analog gauges. The driver also has access to adaptive cruise control, collision warning, pedestrian warning as well as lane departure and lane change warning.

Benjamin Zhang/Business Insider

In the center console is a 10.25-inch high definition display running a version of BMW Group's iDrive infotainment system. It serves as a display for the Phantom's elaborate system of cameras.

Benjamin Zhang/Business Insider

This even includes a thermal imaging night vision camera. Perfect for spotting animals on a dark country road or paparazzi hiding in the bushes.

2018 Rolls-Royce Phantom VIII gives opulence a high-tech reboot

Chris Davies - Jul 27, 2017, 3:00 pm CDT

A new Rolls-Royce is something special, but a new Rolls-Royce Phantom is something rare. Having debuted back in 1925, until now only seven generations of car have borne the nameplate. Now, with the arrival of the new 2018 Phantom, there's an eighth generation, and it promises to be the most luxurious, the most powerful, and the most cossetting of any to-date.

There's no mistaking it for anything else, though the design is completely new versus the outgoing Phantom. It sits upon a completely fresh platform that Rolls-Royce is calling "Architecture of Luxury": all-aluminum, it's roughly 30-percent stiffer than the old car, as well as lighter. It'll be the spaceframe that all the future cars from the automaker are based upon.

According to the company, it's more flexible than any other platform from more mundane automakers. Rather than a simple monocoque, it's designed to scale to any size or type of car the future plans may call for, including accepting different engine, traction, and control systems. Indeed, it'll be the basis for the upcoming Project Cullinan SUV, and later on the next Ghost, Wraith, and Dawn.

"Avast Free Antivirus combines an antivirus engine that scores very well in testing with a surprisingly extensive collection of bonus features."

— Neil J. Rubenking, PCMag

For the new Phantom, it's paired with air suspension and new chassis control systems for the traditional "Magic Carpet" ride the automaker is known for. That uses body and wheel acceleration, steering input, and even the view from the car's cameras to figure out the millions of suspension setting calculations made every second. A new double-wishbone front axle and 5-link rear axle help with lateral roll and shear forces, paired with all-wheel steering. A stereo camera system – which Rolls-Royce have named the "Flagbearer" in reference to the old requirement of a red flag carrying servant walking ahead of the earliest cars – tracks the road ahead to preemptively adjust the suspension at speeds up to 62 mph.

On top of this new platform is an all-new design. Borrowing from the striking 103EX concept last year, like the spaceframe it's constructed from aluminum, with Rolls-Royce using especially light join-lines to make the whole thing look like it's carved from a single block of metal. Nobody, meanwhile, will mistake that metal for any other marque.

At the front, the Pantheon grille has been raised higher than on the outgoing car, leaving the Spirit of Ecstasy a half-inch taller. Rather than standing proud of the bodywork, though, the hand-polished stainless steel grille is integrated into the bodywork, flanked with new laser headlamps that promise light projected almost 2,000 feet down the road ahead. More stainless steel appears on the hood, blending up into the windshield surround.

From the side, classic features like the privacy-shielding wide C-pillar are retained, but there's now a softer feel courtesy of the new side-finisher. The rear glass is more sharply raked than before, while the tail tapers more distinctly. The rear lamps get integrated Double-RR badges. Wheels up to 22-inches are offered.

Once upon a time, Rolls-Royce didn't discuss power figures, preferring only to say that its cars had "sufficient" grunt for any driver. Times change, but while the 2018 Phantom's numbers may be public, what hasn't altered is that the figures are huge. Blame a new 6.75-liter twin-turbo V12 for that.

It's good for 563 horsepower and 664 lb-ft. of torque, the latter arriving at a low 1,700 rpm. A ZF 8-speed gearbox is linked to satellite-aided transmission software, that looks to the road ahead to select the most appropriate gear in advance. Top speed is an electronically-limited 155 mph, and 0-62 mph comes in 6.3 seconds, not bad for a car weighing 5,882 pounds in short wheelbase form.

Not that you'll really hear that engine. Aiming for the title of "most silent motor car in the world," the engineers added more than 266 pounds of sound insulation, and spec'd 6mm two-layer glazing for all the glasswork. Double-skin alloy on areas within the floor and bulkhead of the new spaceframe are new to the auto segment, and then heavy foam and felt are inserted between those layers.

Meanwhile, new Silent-Seat tires get an extra foam layer inside to cut noise from the internal cavity. The result, Rolls-Royce says, is a car so quiet the acoustic engineer went away to double-check his equipment. It's roughly 10-percent quieter than the old Phantom at 62 mph.

The power-doors close automatically, both front and rear, and in the cabin there's no shortage of luxury. A huge Starlight Headliner puts LED pinpricks of light overhead, and there's a vast selection of different wood veneers that can be selected for the door interiors, center consoles, dashboard, and picnic tables. Power-operated rear tables and displays motor out of the back of the new, hand-sculpted seats. Rolls-Royce will offer lounge, individual, individual with fixed center console, and a new "Sleeping Seat" options for the rear.

On the tech side, there's a 360-degree camera view, night vision, active cruise control, a WiFi hotspot, and all the active safety you'd expect from a modern luxury vehicle. The dashboard embeds all the instrumentation into a sheet of toughened glass the automaker is calling The Gallery. Speed and such are shown on a 12.3-inch color display, and there's an analog clock and a retractable center LCD.

The Gallery really is a gallery, mind. The dashboard can play host to a bespoke piece of art, with Rolls-Royce working with a number of designers and artists on projects including porcelain roses, oil paintings, or even gold-plated 3D maps of the owner's DNA. Alternatively, you can have an artist of your choice create something, or opt for silk, wood, metal, or leather.

How much will all this cost you? Pricing is yet to be confirmed, but the 2018 Phantom will not be a cheap vehicle – even before you start personalizing and customizing it. The first orders will begin production in August, with deliveries starting toward the end of the year.
