Counsel,

We will provide the charts Samsung requested, but as a courtesy, not because its required to present damages on all similar products. If Samsung wants to object or complain, I am sure it will. Samsung is very good at complaining, obstructing and avoiding the merits.

Regards,

Michael

Jeff,

I strongly disagree with your recap. You asked me to provide charts for additional products based on your belief that our representative products were inadequate. Rather than fight about it I agreed to provide the charts you requested. Now you are telling me you will oppose my attempts to provide you with the charts you requested? I don't appreciate this gamesmanship. Do you want additional charts or not?

Best,

Chris Evans

Hello Chris,

Thank you for speaking with me last week regarding Samsung's concerns about CyWee's infringement contentions. Below is a summary, including a response on the first item:

1. You offered to provide additional claim charts for the Note 7, J5 Prime, J7, and J7 active within 3 weeks. Samsung will oppose any attempt by CyWee to amend its contentions to include new charts or name new products, absent a showing of good cause sufficient under the local patent rules.
2. CyWee's position is that the current scope of accused products is limited to those currently charted in CyWee's July 12 contentions and the products for which CyWee now wishes to provide claim charts, discussed above. Samsung disputes that the Note 7, J5 Prime, J7, and J7 active are properly accused products, and Samsung will oppose any attempt by CyWee to amend its contentions to include products not previously named, absent a showing of good cause sufficient under the local patent rules.
3. CyWee confirmed that it is not currently asserting infringement under the doctrine of equivalents and Samsung can deem any reference to DOE in the contentions as withdrawn. To the extent that CyWee later wishes to assert DOE infringement following claim construction, CyWee will seek to amend its contentions pursuant to the local patent rules.

Please let me know if you disagree with any of the above. I will follow up separately regarding our discussion of CyWee's deposition notice to Mr. Lee.

Regards,
Jeff

If every Android device infringes the same claims the same way, as here, there is no need to repeat the same chart over and over. This letter is a waste of time. Samsung admitted every product infringed in pre-suit meetings. This case is only about damages unless Samsung offers false, bad faith defenses.

We will supplement according to the rules, not your demands.
