Tuesday was a big day in the Austin tech world: Internet giant Google announced the opening of its new downtown office. Located at 500 West Second Street, the 29-story building two blocks west of City Hall, the new space measures approximately 300,000 square feet and will have space for more than 450 Google employees.

The company showed off its new office in celebration of the 10 years it has been in Austin, which started with its acquisition of Postini, an email security and archiving company, in 2007.

“Googlers” (the company’s term for its employees, we think) working on products and teams including Android, G Suite, Google Play, people operations, finance, engineering, and marketing recently moved into the new space. Google expects to add two more floors, currently under construction, next year.
